Up Pops the Elephant
Ethiopian Victories
The Lady of the Legs
A Royal Wedding

On election day, to the amazement of professors and James Farley, who thought him safely buried, the old Republican elephant got his head and shoulders out of the political grave. His friends predict "by 1936 he will be entirely above ground and cavorting around, like his old self."

Stocks went up a little, just a little; railroads, apparently convinced that the elephant is a friend, not the donkey, were cheerful, and cotton "jumped" 50 cents. That's the political news.

New York City's mayor, LaGuardia, lost many of his aldermen, but is not disturbed. He likes the expression of the red-heeled French Louis the Fourteenth, L'etat c'est moi, "I am the state." It is no exaggeration to say that Mayor LaGuardia is the Fusion party in New York. He says a man who attends to his business does not need an organization. Tammany doubts that.

Addis Ababa announces "important Ethiopian victories," including "the bloody rout of an Italian advance patrol, trapped in Makale, ambush and slaughter of four hundred Italians in the Shibeli river valley, defeat of an Italian advance on Gorahai. Furthermore, Ethiopia announces two Italian airplanes shot down by Ethiopian riflemen.

The machine gun ambush, alleged to have killed four hundred Italian soldiers, was followed by savage hand-to-hand fighting, in which, it is announced, "no prisoners were taken on either side."

Madamoiselle Mistinguette, past 60, is among us. Told by her friends that she "looks 35," a statement not unusual, and said to possess "the most beautiful legs in the world," this lady says, to look 35 when past 60, you must yawn as frequently as possible. "Yawning strengthens every muscle, keeps you alive and young and beautiful," says the lady of the legs.

To yawn means to relax, which is always good for you, whether it makes you beautiful or not.

The Duke of Gloucester, third son of King George and Queen Mary, yesterday married Lady Alice Montagu-Douglas-Scott, member of an ancient Scottish family and said to be related in direct line to Mary Queen of Scots. The world will wish for her a life happier than that of the tall queen. Ignoring the idea that "royalty must marry royalty," British princes and princesses add fresh new blood to the royal line, a sort of "transfusion" that brings strength.

The royal bride, daughter of the late Duke of Buccleuch, is 33, the age at which a girl should marry, as Plato tells you. The husband is 35.

In New York City today, President Roosevelt, after dining at the Masonic Temple, will see his sons, James and Franklin, Jr., receive the Masonic third degree. President Roosevelt has long been a Mason, like many Presidents, including George Washington, before him.

Wilbur Glenn Voliva, interesting resident of Illinois, who denies that the world is round and knows because he "has been around it," announces his candidacy for Congress on a "share-the-brains" program.

If that sharing could be done, it would improve conditions considerably and would eliminate the hopeless "share-the-wealth" program. Increase brain power and will, enabling more of us to create wealth—that is the program.

The London Stock Exchange complaint of a "scarcity of dollars" now disappearing presently, when this country begins to lead the world in the manufacture of money is it now leads in moving pictures and automobiles.

We cannot forever inflate with bonds. The annual interest on United States bonds now is about twice as great as the total national debt before the war. That should be nearly enough interest even for this rich country, with its 10,000,000 idle.

Chicago has decided to adopt New York standard time, beginning March 1. Expecting to have, soon, New York's population and more, a Stock Exchange business bigger than New York's, Chicago thinks she may as well start now with New York time.

England, France and Italy are again talking peace, seeking some basis of compromise to satisfy everybody, including, if possible, Haile Selassie.

Colonel Julian, the "Black Eagle," from Harlem, N. Y., now in Addis Ababa, denies that any American Negro attempted to assassinate the Ethiopian Emperor.

PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE, in his last address to the business organization of the government. Washington, D. C., January 28, 1929..

Unquestionably, however, wise governmental policies, and particularly wise economy in government expenditures with a steady reduction of the national debt, have had a dominant influence."

POLICE CURB ANTI-WAR RADICALS

As Boston prohibited use of Parkman Bandstand for what police called a Communist-inspired anti-war demonstration, Boston University students today repudiated attempts to have them refuse to bear arms in defense of the United States.

Students of the five B. U. colleges, in meetings called to consider tomorrow's peace demonstration by the Students' Christian Movement, voted unanimously to repudiate that part of the program which urges refusal to participate in any war the nation may undertake.

"Such a pledge is too controversial a subject to serve as a rallying point for a peace meeting," students said

REDS BARRED THERE

Prior to repudiation, delegations had conferred with President Daniel L. Marsh. He heartily commended their action.

Refusal to permit use of Parkman Bandstand for the demonstration came after the police radical squad reported the Student's Chris-

Taxes 'Beat Deal,' Says Lodge

New Deal 'Extravagance' Discussed by Gov. Alf Landon. See Page 10

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

High taxes, currency tinkering, soaring food prices, and a general disillusionment from impossible Democratic promises are accounted for the big Republican election victories by Henry Cabot Lodge of Beverly candidate for the G. O. P. nomination for United States senator.

Lodge, grandson of the late senior senator, today expressed the opinion that the voters feel that jobs are still far away.

He says the trouble lies directly with the kind of government they are receiving.

In an interview, Mr. Beverly member of the Legislature, when asked if he thought the election results were due to any one cause said:

"No, I believe that in an election of this kind many factors

LABOR UNION FOR RELIEF WORKERS

A labor union of white-collar workers under the ERA and WPA has been effected here, it was learned today.

The aim of the organization is to obtain a wage scale of $1.20 to $1.50 an hour, and plans have been made to follow the practice adopted by relief workers in New York of threatening to stop work unless concessions are made.

Inspectors Benjamin Goodman and William Goldston, of the police headquarters radical squad, are investigating to determine if there is any communistic influence behind the new organization, as there is behind several unions of WPA workers in New York city.

QUARTERS RENTED

The name of the new organization here is the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, with quarters at 6 Boylston place, rented from the Women's Trade Union League.

The loyal organization is a branch of a national union which is seeking affiliation with the A. F. of L.

Leaders here had a conference with Ernest A. Johnson, secretary of the Building Trades Council, and asked him to intercede for them with State WPA Administrator Arthur G. Rotch in an effort to gain recognition of the union.

About 35 relief workers attended the last meeting, Tuesday.

DENY RADICALISM

A member of the newly-formed organization denied that any of the members was affiliated with bodies that were or are at present connected with communistic activities.

Harold H. Theiss, an engineer, is president of the new group. It was stated that in and around Boston the membership reaches to the 500 mark. There are a few women on the membership rolls.

The organization is non-political and is made up of college graduates. The movements of the group have reached the stage where several conferences have been held with ERA and WPA officials to determine a method of relief.

B. U. STUDENT GETS RICHES, KILLS SELF

Within a few months after he had inherited a fortune, John J. Schwendeman, 22, Boston University junior, musician and summer dance hall proprietor, committed suicide today in the garage of his Watertown home.

The body was found by his father, George A. Schwendeman, piano tuner, when he arose in the Maplewood street house and learned that the son had not been in the house all night.

Carbon monoxide fumes were heavy in the garage, and the doors were closed. The switch of the car was on and a car window open.

RECENTLY GOT LEGACY

Medical Examiner Thomas Morton Gallagher, after interviewing the family and friends, pronounced the death one of suicide and revealed that young Schwendeman, who conducted a summer dance hall at Rockport, recently had inherited a legacy.

The youth was a saxophone player and led an orchestra composed of Boston University students. He attended the college of business administration.

Besides his father, Schwendeman is survived by a sister Mary, who is a school teacher in New York.

He attended Watertown High and played in the school band, then studied at Huntington School for nearly two years, transferring to Boston University.

IN GOOD STANDING

Although college records show that he was below grade last June and was asked to withdraw, he successfully pleaded his case before the committee on scholastic standing, made up his points and was in good standing this fall.

Some time ago he inherited money from his grandmother and this summer he leased and conducted The Rendezvous, a dance hall in Rockport.

Dies "For Love" in South

Being shipped home today from San Juan, Porto Rico, is the body of this Boston University graduate. Miss Charlotte Elizabeth Isaacson of Wethersfield, Conn. She shot herself, police say, in a fit of despondency brought about by disappointment in love. She was a teacher in a government school at Guayama, Porto Rico. Story on Page 3.

GUNS PLACED UPON RIDGE TO ATTACK MAKALE

War at Glance

Northern Italian army, 120,000 strong, nears Makale, reaching a ridge overlooking the caravan-center town.

Ethiopian forces massing 40 miles south of Makale, at Amba Alaji.

In Rome, Il Duce ordered out men from military classes of 1900 to 1910 apparently for home service only.

With the Italian army before Makale, Nov. 7 (INS)—Resuming their southward push today, Italian forces occupied the mountain ridge overlooking the Makale plain and dominating the approach to that important caravan center.

In an immense surge of the army of 120,000 men all along the 30 mile front, the Italian troops began their new drive at dawn, after a two-day rest, during which communication lines were drawn and supplies moved up.

At 11.30 a. m., local time, infantry, light artillery and machine gun teams occupied the commanding ridge.

Similar advances were made all along the line.

ETHIOPIANS MASSING

No enemy concentrations were encountered.

But airplane scouts reported there are still Ethiopian warriors around Makale, and a clash is possible.

As a result of today's push, all Ethiopia, north of the Takkaze and Bequests of $25,000 each to Children's Hospital, Boston, and the President and Fellows of Harvard College are made in the $1,000,000 will of Frederick S. Mead of Brookline, allowed today by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Dedham probate court.

These bequests will be paid after the death of Mrs. Catherine R. Mead of Fisher avenue, Brookline, the testator's widow, who receives $100,000 and all real estate.

The will contains bequests of $10,000 to Mrs. Ada M. Roberts of 34 Lime street, Boston, Mead's sister, and $100 for each year of their service to all employes in the Mead household.

The document was drawn March 20, 1935.

La Hepburn Twice Escapes Injuries

Newark, N. J., Nov. 7 (INS)—Fleeing from photographers, Katharine Hepburn today narrowly escaped being hit by the whirling propeller of the plane aboard which she arrived here in company with Leland Hayward.

It was the screen star's second escape from injury within 24 hours. Last night, the plane in which she arrived at Pittsburgh narrowly averted a crack-up as it landed.

Miss Hepburn, wearing brown corduroy slacks, saw a number of photographers approaching the plane as she alighted.

Turning, she sprinted for the hangar, ducking under the forward fuselage of the ship and passing within a few inches of the whirling propellers.

She gave no indication that she had realized her danger. Once in the hangar, she leaped into an automobile, which drove off toward New York.

ITALIANS ADVANCE AS FOE PREPARES FOR BATTLE

Gheva rivers, is now in Italian hands.

Ras Seyoum, Northern Ethiopian commander, is believed to be in the Amba Alaji region with 250,000 men.

With this huge force he is organizing a strong defensive line to make the major Ethiopian stand there, 40 miles south of Makale.

Ras Seyoum's army includes troops under individual commands of Ras Kassa and Ras Mulugueta, minister of war.

ENTER MAKALE TOMORROW

Tomorrow morning columns commanded by Generals Ruggero Santini and Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli will effect a junction south of Makale.

They expect to enter Makale by noon tomorrow.

Santini's troops passed the small village of Cahemdet'micasal en route to Tacle Ailaot and Maedem.

They halted in these positions while native soldiers commanded by Pirzio-Baroli on the right developed the strategic movement, passing via caravan road along the Gheva river.

These troops passed Mais Agula near the village of Cimserea and went on to a position at Mossobo

ONE SLIGHT REVERSE

A slight reverse was suffered by advance Italian troops who last night reached the hill-tops 11 miles from Makale. They were dislodged and forced back in a battle with Ethiopian irregulars.

Early this morning, however, these Italian forces with the others resumed the advance and the Ethiopians fell back without resisting.

As soon as night falls, the savage screams of the warriors may be heard again in a fresh attack.

The Ethiopians participating in the night attacks are Tigrean warriors belonging to the armies of Ras Seyoum and Ras Kassa, who are waging a ferocious guerilla campaign in the area north and northeast of Makale.

They occupy Makale by night, but slip away in the daytime to avoid Italian air attacks.

FIERCE NIGHT ATTACKS

Night tactics call for warriors to creep up, silent and naked in the darkness, to within ten or 15 yards of the Italian sentries, then dart forward with eerie war cries.

The Tigreans show total disregard for death, using bayonets, spears, and daggers, but rarely bringing rifles into play.

Two native Italian non-commissioned officers were killed, ten natives wounded, and two white officers wounded when a patrol encountered a force of about 200 Ethiopians southwest of Hauzien, last night.

Ethiopian casualties were not known, since the fleeing natives carried off their dead and wounded, but their losses were believed to be heavy.

The Italian force responded to rifle fire from the Ethiopians, then charged with bayonets.

Another clash occurred on the right flank, south of Akeum, when "canned cavalry," as the troops call the fast, light tanks, came upon about 50 Ethiopians who opened fire.

They were met with bursts from the tanks and fled, with no losses on either side.

Italian tanks proved their value around the Makale sector, where, far in advance of the main body, they scurried about the hills and ravines on reconnaissance.

Ethiopians Have Russian "Pill Boxes" in Defenses

Addis Ababa, Nov. 7 (AP)—A line of defenses north of Makale was reported today to have been manned by Ras Seyoum's "Death or Glory Boys" of Tigre province in an effort to stem the Italian advance on the objective city of the northern front.

The defenders under Ras Seyoum, Ethiopian commander-in-chief of the north, were said to have taken positions in "pill-boxes" built by a Russian military adviser, prepared to give their lives rather than surrender to the Fascist forces.

A government spokesman, commenting on reports of the defense of Makale, declared:

"The northern army commanders are carrying out to the letter the emperor's orders by retiring slowly, refusing to give battle and enticing the enemy.

"Our casualties are very small, little ammunition is being expended and the Italian lines of communications are lengthening daily."

Duce Calls Troops For Home Defense

Rome, Nov. 7 (AP)—Fascist Italy took precautions today to meet "eventualities" in case current diplomatic negotiations for a peace formula to prevent a spread of Italo-Ethiopian hostilities to Europe should fail.

A new decree called corporals of the infantry, artillery, engineering and other special lines of the military classes from 1900 to 1910 (men born in those years) to the colors.

The call to the corporals ordered them to be in readiness to serve for 30 days, indicating they were for home service and only if needed.

They were estimated to number a few thousand.

This summons followed indications that Premier Mussolini considered his East African armies virtually complete for the campaign of conquest in Ethiopia. Seven large transports were restored to civil work.

Vessels already had carried some 290,000 Italians to Africa, giving Il Duce a full third of a million troops on two Ethiopian fronts

Crown Prince Prepared To Rule in Ethiopia

Desaye, Ethiopia, Nov. 6 (AP)—Crown Prince Asfa Wossn started by airplane today for Addis Ababa.

When his father, Emperor Haile Selassie, comes to Desaye, probably next week, Asfa Wossn will take over imperial affairs of the capital.

It was stated the Crown Prince's presence in Addis Ababa was an essential part of the plan of the Emperor's advisers who, if anything should happen to Haile Selassie in the field, would be in a position to put Asfa Wossn on the throne.

Once More a "Big Wind" Hits Florida Beauty Spot

With roof beams and uprooted trees strewn from sidewalk to sidewalk, this Miami, Fla., street offers graphic evidence of the force of the "freak" hurricane which has newly swept the city, taking two lives and causing damage estimated at $3,000,000.

Whee-ee-ee! Can't you almost hear the howl of the wind as it rages across this Biscayne Bay waterfront, lashing the fronds of the swaying palm trees and piling up, hour by hour, its total of destruction. This picture was made as Florida's latest hurricane had almost spent its force and was heading westward in the direction of the Gulf of Mexico.

U. S. 'NEUTRAL' FIGHT

Hull Seeks Anti-War Powers

Washington, Nov. 7 (INS)—An intensive drive will be made by the state department to have Congress clothe the President with unprecedented powers to keep this country out of war and to strengthen American diplomatic influence to prevent wars.

The President would be given authority to sever trade relations with any nation that resorts to war, and to use his own discretion in determining when embargoes shall be proclaimed and whether they shall be enforced against both or only one of the belligerents.

This was learned today following Secretary of State Cordell Hull's assertion in a radio broadcast that imposition of an arms embargo against warring nations was not sufficient to safeguard American neutrality.

Congress, at last session, made it mandatory upon the President to impose an arms embargo immediately upon the outbreak of war and against both belligerents.

In advancing the State Department's theory that it is more important to try and avert war than to devise methods of trying to keep out of it when it has commenced, Hull went further than any administration official has gone.

He said flatly he conceived it to be the duty of the government, "in the interest of our country and humanity," not only to try and keep keep out of foreign wars, but "to use our influence in any appropriate way to bring about the peaceful settlement of international differences."

Britain Hails Hull's Statement for Peace

London, Nov. 7 (AP)—The suggestion of American Secretary of State Cordell Hull for greater cooperation of the United States with other governments for peace was regarded here today as a definite contribution to international good will and peace.

Hull's speech, prominently displayed in all newspapers, was read with sympathetic interest in government quarters.

Great Britain was especially interested in what the United States might do in respect to restriction of raw materials to Italy.

Nancy Carroll To "Stay Single"

Carson City, Nev., Nov. 7 (INS)—Nancy Carroll, red-haired motion picture star, today denied she had plans to remarry as she prepared to return to Hollywood after being granted a divorce from Bolton Mallory, former magazine editor, whom she charged with cruelty.

Mallory is living near Acapulco, Mex., where he is said to have remarried after obtaining a Mexican divorce from the actress two months ago.

Hurricane Nears Florida Again

New Orleans, Nov. 7 (AP)—Hurricane winds, which caused eight deaths on Florida's east coast, was expected to lash that state's coast line east of Pensacola early tonight.

At 8:30 a. m., Central Standard Time, the New Orleans weather bureau issued an advisory saying the disturbance, of small area, was 150 miles slightly east of south of Pensacola and moving apparently north northeastward.

7 Hurt by Blast in Providence

Providence, Nov. 7—Seven persons were injured and a score of others narrowly escaped death today when an unused gasoline storage tank exploded in Willard avenue, hurling two huge cement blocks 100 feet and wrecking ten automobiles.

The known injured are William Smith, 13, of Bodman street; William Arrighie, 33, of Stanford street; Victor Chambers, 72, of Rhode avenue, and Ethel Mandel, 18, of Public street.

Three unidentified children and a man were caught in the blast and were seen running from the vicinity, their faces covered with blood.

GIBBONS' FIRST MESSAGE SINCE COLLAPSE

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Cairo, Nov. 7—Hello everybody! This is my first dispatch since I pulled out from the Italian army in Ethiopia.

In the last ten days I have been down here near sea level, trying to catch up on my breathing.

Six weeks of nights and days in the field with that fast-moving quarter of a million of Mussolini's men pushing forward across the top of the world in what may well be called the war of the stratosphere, was enough to sort of run me out of gas.

I mean that covering a war a mile and a half in the air is something new in the experience of a correspondent whose lungs were trained to the oxygen capacity of sea level air.

It was the highest-up war I ever attended.

The slightest exertion brings on extreme fatigue to those unaccustomed to altitudes of between 7000 and 8000 feet.

RAN OUT OF AIR

You gasp for air and don't get it, and the result is, you feel low on account of being so high, if you get what I mean.

I simply ran out of air and had to come down off the roof to the first floor of the world, and get a fresh supply of oxygen.

I have not yet seen clippings of my dispatches as they were printed in America, and this is the first one I have written that has not passed through the hands of the Italian military censor, but I have no revelations or exposes of conditions or facts which we correspondents were not permitted to send.

I left all my baggage, tent, bedding typewriter and maps to Bill Chaplin, who arrived for Universal Service several days before my departure, and he can share them with Eddie Hunter, my old pal of Manchurian war days, who passed through Egypt several days ago on his ways to Asmara.

ONLY ONE ARMY

The most curious thing I found out about this African war is that it is not a war at all, for the simple reason that it requires two armies to make war, and there is only one in Northern Ethiopia.

The Italian advance has met with no resistance of any great consequence so far on the northern front.

I believe that the strategic center of this conflict hovers over this eastern end of the Mediterranean, where the British and Italians eye one another with armed suspicion. Neither one wishes to cause an overt act which would bring on hostilities and possibly precipitate a general conflict.

Between now and November 18, the date for application of the proposed League of Nations sanctions, I predict that this part of the world will be more productive of world-important news than the advance of the lines in northern Ethiopia.

HITLER CLOSES DOOR TO ITALY

(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Geneva, Nov. 7—The gap in League of Nations sanctions against Italy, caused by the "desertion" of Italy's neighbors and allies, Austria, Hungary, and Albania, was plugged today with informal notification that Germany would unofficially participate in collective action.

At the same time, Secretary Hull's radio speech, calling for more flexible neutrality powers for the American executive, was acclaimed in League circles as helping to put teeth into the League's action for hastening the end of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

W. R. HEARST ARRIVES IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—William Randolph Hearst came back today to "my home state of New York" because of California income taxes.

"If I stay there six consecutive months I am subject to the new 12 per cent California income tax, so I have returned to my home State of New York," said the publisher.

"That is one of the purposes of my journey here. The other is, of course, business."

Hearst, looking physically fit, wearing a light gray suit and a greatcoat of light blue, arrived in the "Ranger," private car of Mrs. Eleanor McCormick Patterson, publisher of the Hearst Washington Herald.

"I am not moving all my business interests out of California," he said in reply to a question. "It is the income tax to which I object most strenuously.

"Under the new laws they have devised out there with great ingenuity, if I remain in the state for six months I must pay, and I don't think I care to stand that."

The publisher expressed the opinion Tuesday's elections "showed a tendency on the part of the voters to incline toward the Republican side of things."

"But I don't know to what extent," he amended quickly.

He declined to comment on the return from Europe last week of Jimmy Walker, former mayor of New York.

He said he would be in the city, "at least until after the holidays."

He was met at the train by two sons, William, Jr., and John, and other officials of the Hearst publishing interests.

SUDAN CUTS OFF AID TO ITALIANS

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

Khartoum, Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Nov. 7.—British authorities, anticipating the beginning of League of Nations penalties, have started to plaster up the Sudan's back door to Italy's Eritrea, which is Kassala, 250 miles east of Khartoum.

Fifteen thousand camels alone have gone across the Italian colonial border by that route, as well as many thousands of head of cattle and sheep, hundreds of truckloads of grain, and every crop of gasoline that Italians could buy—at high prices.

But orders have been given that no more camels can be "spared" from the Sudan.

Another Back Bay Deb Succeeds on Broadway

FOLLOWS IN STEPS OF KATHLEEN MORAN

BURRAGE GIRL NIGHT CLUB SINGER

Broadway went plenty social, in the Boston manner, this week.

So today tongues along the Main Stem predicted a general exodus from the Back Bay as soon as the success of two of the city's career debutantes was sufficiently noised about.

Kathleen Moran started it. The beautiful daughter of international oil titan John J. Moran deserted the tea tables for a working girl's role some months ago.

Broadway was her goal and she made it handily—on Tuesday night.

She was only a step ahead of Alice Hathaway Burrage—another talented daughter of the Massachusetts social register.

Kathleen scored her first professional stage success in Max Gordan's "Pride and Prejudice" which opened in the Music Box Theater with the Boston girl in the part of "Belinda."

Wins Praise

A minor role to be sure—but one praised by critics who predicted the dashing Kathleen soon would eclipse her more experienced sisters of the stage.

Miss Burrage, who literally grew up in a bed of orchids, turned Vincent Club vocal experience to professional use at the Club New Yorker, one of the brighter night spots, last night.

There, the Boston and Beverly debutants received her spotlight baptism — and her golden voice brought praise in abundance.

While Kathleen Moran already had won fame as a professional model before tackling her first stage job, the night club opening was a new experience for Alice.

She has had plenty of amateur experience in Junior League productions, but, in the main, her education had fitted her for a quiet background of wealth.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Burrage of Beacon street and Beverly. Her sister is the wife of Forrester A. (Big Tim) Clark, former Harvard gridiron hero and a polo player of note.

Her father also won renown on the polo field as a member of the Myopia Club.

Her grandfather, the late Albert C. Burrage, one time president of the American Horticultural Society, was formerly known as the "richest man in New England."

Orchid Setting

The senior Burrage was a lover of orchids and is said to have popularized the flower in America. The debut of Katherine Burrage, Alice's sister, was made in an orchid setting and was one of the most elaborate and costly in Boston's history.

Alice, who is 20, made her debut two years ago at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Alice H. Burrage, on Commonwealth avenue. It was in contrast to the party given the older sister, being in the form of a dinner dance at which Alice appeared gowned as a Venetian lady.

Her success last night at the Club New York has assured her engagement as a featured soloist.

Kathleen Moran, chosen last year as one of Boston's best dressed women, made her debut in Washington. Her home is on Marlboro street.

ALICE HATHAWAY BURRAGE

U.S. Action Bars Woman Air Pilot

Pittsburgh, Nov. 7 (AP)—Amelia Earhart and Helen Richey agreed today that Helen—the nation's first woman transport pilot—lost out in commercial aviation because she was a woman.

Helen Richey

Miss Richey, who took a job as co-pilot for Central Airlines last January, confirmed that her sex handicapped her in the work and that she resigned more than a month ago.

"I don't want to be drawn into any controversy," she added, however, "because I left the Airlines in a friendly spirit.

Miss Earhart, the country's first lady of the air, brought Miss Richey's resignation to public attention in urging creation of a fund to "help woman to gain her proper place in aviation."

She told how the McKeesport flyer landed a job as co-pilot on a mail line, but "what happened?"

"Well, the pilots' union refused to take her in, not because of lack of ability, but because she was a female.

"The result of this action was that the Department of Commerce refused to let her fly passengers in bad weather, so the poor girl could not do her part at all and had to resign."

Vanderbilt Wife Sees No Rift

Clarksburg, W. Va., Nov. 7 (AP) Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., explained today why she is visiting her Clarksburg home—she doesn't like that big Vanderbilt house on Fifth avenue in New York.

"I don't want to go to that house; it is like an empty hotel," said the former Helen Varner, while denying she and her husband are contemplating a divorce.

Reports of a rift between Vanderbilt and his third wife were published in New York papers, but Max D. Steuer, attorney for Vanderbilt, said he knew nothing about a divorce.

Samuel Plait, counsel for Vanderbilt in two previous cases, said in Reno, Nev., however, the couple has "separated."

Mrs. Vanderbilt said she and her husband spent last Friday and Saturday together in Washington. "But, you see, it was this way:

"Neil and I had planned to join his family in the South where his father, who is in ill health, has been cruising. Then full business plans and an important contract necessitated Neil's presence in New York.

"When I found we could not go South at once, I preferred returning to Clarksburg. When I hear from Neil I will be able to say just when I will join him."

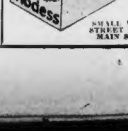

She added: "No, I do not have a lawyer."

Van Loan to Try Love Over Again

Los Angeles, Nov. 7 (AP)—H. H. Van Loan, short story and screen writer, who complained he was in and out of domestic hot water during the 13 years of wedded life with his first wife, is preparing to marry again.

"But this marriage is going to be different," declared Van Loan.

KILLS 5 He Cannot CURE

DOCTOR SAYS 'TWAS MERCY

London, Nov. 7 (AP)—An unidentified English doctor has admitted, the Daily Mail said today, taking the lives of five private patients whom he could not cure.

In what the newspaper called the doctor's "confession," the medical man declared:

"I've taken life on five different occasions. My conscience never pricked me. I still carry with me memories of those cases and the happy faces before they died."

The interview with the doctor, described by the Mail as a "kindly faced elderly family doctor," was used as an argument for formation of the proposed voluntary Euthanasia Legalization Society, designed to allow patients suffering from incurable diseases "the right to die."

The doctor said, the newspaper reported:

"I've broken the law, and circumstances being similar I'd do it again . . . If need be, I'm prepared to face any tribunal in the land—my justification is not my excuse, for what I've done is, humanity knows, unlawful."

The five cases, the doctor explained in the interview, included one of a newly-born baby "clearly doomed to imbecility" and four adults afflicted with incurable diseases.

Sponsors of the "right to die" society, headed by Lord Moynihan, famous English surgeon, plan to introduce a bill into the House of Lords.

Mother's Death Ends 'Sacrifice'

Now Plans to Care For Family

Less than a month ago, pretty Mabel Bell, 16, of Dorchester, offered herself as a sacrifice bride to any man who could assure care of her invalid mother for life.

Now, it was learned by the Boston Evening American today, her sacrifice will not be necessary.

The mother, invalid for many months, is dead from a malady which physicians said some time ago could not be checked.

Mabel Bell's mother died last Thursday and was buried on Sunday. Meanwhile, one of the more than 200 men who had written her in response to her offer to be a sacrifice bride, was on his way east from Ohio to talk with her personally.

Today, at her home in Dorchester which houses herself, her stepfather and 10 brothers and sisters, stepbrothers and stepsisters, Mabel declared that she will devote her time now toward keeping the family together.

Gold Star Mother to Lose Home

The shrine she built for the hero son she lost at Belleau Wood is to be lost forever to a Gold Star mother.

Mrs. Emma E. Dunfree's solitary hope of retaining her little green boathouse home on Wellesley's Morse Pond shore was taken from her today when officials of the town's American Legion Post told her they had failed in efforts to help her.

Post officers took up Mrs. Dunfree's case three weeks ago after Judge Thomas H. Connolly of Brighton, Marshall C. Spring and Wellesley Holding Company counsel informed her his clients would advertise her cottage for sale.

Appeals to banks, Home Owners' Loan Corporation and New Deal agencies had all failed, they said.

With tears in her eyes, Mrs. Dunfree told them:

"I've put everything I have into my little home. It is all I have to remember my Alton, who went to death in France with the 55th Company, Fifth Marines.

"His last words to me were: 'Keep our home, Mother—if God wills that I die with the boys.'

"Now they're going to drive me away. There's no place for me to go. I don't know what I'll do."

B. U. GIRL Kills Self for LOVE

CUBA ROMANCE BLASTED

Disappointed in love, Charlotte E. Isaacson, 26, Boston University graduate and teacher in the government school at Guyama, Porto Rico, is on her way back to the United States with a bullet in her heart.

Her death, termed by the police at San Juan, P. R., as suicide, became known here today when her body was shipped at the tropic port for her home in Wethersfield, Conn.

She had been a teacher in the Guayama High School since her graduation from Boston University in 1928.

Members of her family said she broke her engagement to a man named Barnes some time ago and during a vacation at home this summer revealed that she was in love with a Cuban physician, Dr. Eduardo Perez.

Their romance, according to her family, had not reached the stage of betrothal. Dispatches from Porto Rico did not mention the doctor in connection with the tragedy.

The betrothal she broke, according to her uncle, Iscar Isaacson, was to a man she met while attending college here.

Her sister, Mrs. Charles Burgar of Wethersfield, told of her romance with the Cuban doctor.

Miss Isaacson, suffering from sinus trouble, came home in April and remained until August, at which time she was again in good health.

Her last letter home, dated October 21, ended "well and happy."

The next word of her was a message that she had been found dead with a revolver beside her.

Curley Warns Democrats Must Organize Anew For '36 Victory

"FORTUNATE NATIONAL ELECTION NOT THIS YEAR"

The Democratic party today is in a bad way.
It needs organization and education.
Governor Curley made this frank interpretation of the result of Tuesday's election at a gathering of more than 1000 prominent Democratic men and women at the Hotel Statler.

The occasion was a supper dance under the auspices of the Women's Division, Democratic State Committee.

It marked the anniversary of the governor's election a year ago in November and was intended as the "cornerstone" upon which the Democratic women "are to build their statewide organization for the party's success in 1936."

The governor was received warmly but his remarks fell upon a chastened group.

"It is fortunate for President Roosevelt, for the Democratic party and for the people of America that the national election will not take place for one year and that during the interval opportunity is presented for the conduct of a campaign of organization and education," the Governor declared.

If properly and intensely conducted, he added, however, "it cannot mean other than Democratic success."

SEEN AS CAMPAIGN OPENER

While he failed to make any open announcement of his political plans, the speech of the chief executive was viewed as the opening gun of the Democratic campaign.

The first outburst of applause came when he was introduced as one who has held every office within the gift of the Massachusetts electorate but United States senator.

Mrs. Margaret O'Riordan, head of the women's division presided.

Other speakers included Mrs. William F. Murray of Milford, Chairman Joseph McGrath of the Democratic State Committee, Lieutenant-Governor Joseph L. Hurley, State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley and State Auditor Thomas Buckley.

Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, daughter of the governor, was absent.

Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, daughter-in-law of the governor, was absent, immediately upon the important work of registration.

He took a fling at the G. O. P. saying that at the request of a radio station offering free time, for four Republican speakers on geographical and racial lines, the party leadership sent in the names of Senator Henry Parkman, Representative Henry Cabot Lodge, Speaker Leverett Saltonstall and former District Attorney Robert Bushnell of Middlesex county.

Bushnell, McGrath commented, represents the racial... ter of the governor, was absent.

Taking up the challenge to the Roosevelt administration, Governor Curley declared "success or failure of the greatest humanitarian social welfare program ever presented in the history of any nation will depend entirely upon the viewpoint and the work that is conducted, not at the election in 1936 but during the period between now and the time the election is held."

Again referring to the election reverses, the Governor blamed it on the "painfully slow progress" that has been made since the Hoover administration.

Rarely, in the history of political parties, he asserted, has so much hostility been shown as has marked the Roosevelt social and economic program.

"It has not been confined to financial and political circles alone," the speaker continued. "Rather did it embrace in a measure every discontented individual in the entire American nation."

He reviewed the plight of the country at the beginning of the present national administration, dwelling upon the "fear" which he said was widespread that the nation might never recover from the blow that had been dealt it.

"The program of the administration nationally contemplates a complete evolution in the economic and social structure of the nation and has for its basic purpose a foundation of that structure so as to render impossible a repetition of the dark days experienced by America during the past six years," he defended.

With a proper organization and educational campaign, the governor expressed the opinion that the President will repeat his victory of three years ago.

VAST PROGRAM BLAMED

He contended that the magnitude of the President's program for the regulation and distribution of products to be largely responsible for the election upsets.

He denounced the "timid and the selfish," and turned thumbs down on a return to the methods blamed by him for bringing on the depression.

In the women of the country, the governor contended, lies the hope of continued success. He characterized the mothers and housewives as the real economists.

To the women also, he said, lies especially the appeal of the "spiritual idealism embraced in the Roosevelt recovery program."

"It's to the women we must look rather than to the men," he emphasized.

Branching from his support of the national policies the governor dwelt at some length upon the achievements of his own administration on Beacon Hill.

He mentioned the liberalization of the workmen's compensation act, emphasizing particularly one law passed giving life weekly payments to those permanently injured or incapacitated in industry.

For a period of 20 years, he charged, Republicans in control of Beacon Hill had blocked attempts to extend the old law which made provision for payments for five years only.

Other accomplishments under his regime he mentioned were the establishment of a limitation on wage attachments; adoption of the 48-hour law in the institutional departments of the state; progress for a sliding scale system of gas and electric rate charges; reductions amounting to $2,000,000 in public utility rates.

Delays that have been met in the work and wages program, he declared, rest with the federal authorities. The state, he pointed out, has met its responsibilities.

McGRATH OPTIMISTIC

Chairman McGrath told the assemblance that insofar as his responsibilities are concerned, the Democratic organization is in better shape for a campaign than ever before with organizations in every city and town.

For the first time in many years, he declared, the party is free from debt and has a surplus.

In addition to this, he said, the committee has a separate women's division that is prepared to embark

Mobile, Ala., Nov. 7 (INS)—Senator David I Walsh, (D.) Massachusetts, attending the jubilee celebration here for the most Rev. T. J. Toolen, is not discouraged over the Republican victories in Tuesday's off-year elections.

"Republican victories do not dishearten or discourage me," he said.

"President Roosevelt has enjoyed amazing popularity and it was impossible to expect that such popularity would remain at its peak all the time.

"But he has accomplished many things during his administration," Senator Walsh added, "and when the electorate goes to the polls next year they will analyze the situation and cast their vote accordingly."

Heavy Taxes Forced Shift To G. O. P., Lodge Declares

play a part. There are personal qualities of the candidates, rivalries between individuals and issues which are purely local."

Q—But were there not certain trends running through the elections?

A—I believe there were. I think there is a general distrust of men who think they are bigger than the causes on which the public welfare hinges and an equal dislike of men who take orders lightly and are unable to offer intelligent opposition and constructive suggestions.

More far reaching even was a belief that many impossible promises have been made and that "RESULTS HAVE NOT BEEN ACHIEVED."

Q—Do you think that taxation played a part?

A—I certainly do. More and more we are seeing that our taxes, no matter how you may label them to begin with, always come to rest on the tired backs of the workers.

Q—Can you illustrate that remark?

A—Well, take our local tax on homes and buildings for instance. It not only burdens everyone who owns a home and keeps him from spending that much money on goods for himself and his family but it also discourages those who might be thinking of building a home or a factory.

It is no accident that the greatest amount of unemployment is in the building trades—among carpenters, plumbers, bricklayers and kindred trades.

It is also impressive that the building industry is our largest single industry and that if employment picks up in that industry the back of the depression would be broken. High local taxes, therefore, are a direct cause of jobless men.

And I believe the voters realize this fact.

CITES TAX CURSE

Q—Do not taxes affect us in other ways?

A—Yes. They not only prevent new industry from arising which would give real jobs to many people. They have also been a principal cause of so many of our industries leaving Massachusetts. This in its turn has been a major cause of depression here.

I also believe that the voters in Tuesday's elections realize that every time they buy one dollar's worth of food about 20 cents of that dollar goes to pay taxes of one kind or another.

Taxes, a tinkering with the currency, the AAA and the deliberately announced purpose of the administration, have raised prices of food to a point which has sickened and discouraged the people of Massachusetts.

They think they have actually had a huge and wholesale wage cut which is what happens when the price of everything goes up and wages remain stationary.

Q—How would you sum it all up?

A—I think it is fair to say that the voters had a feeling of failure. They believe that after all is said and done the day of the good job is still far away.

And they came to the entirely correct conclusion that many of our troubles in Massachusetts are due to government and that therefore government can and must remove them.

Tuesday's elections were the first step in that direction.

DEATH ENDS BILLY SUNDAY'S LONG FIGHT AGAINST SIN

Chicago, Nov. 7 (US)—The Rev. William Ashley ("Billy") Sunday has fought his last fight against sin.

The fiery evangelist—"the man who saved more than a million souls"—died here of a sudden attack of angina pectoris at the home of his brother-in-law, William J. Thompson.

Mrs. Sunday was with him in his final moment.

The attack which cost his life was the third he had suffered in recent years—and for the past year he had struggled against poor health, continuing his preaching, although he had abandoned the "big top" tents which brought him world fame.

WRESTLED WITH DEVIL

To those who knew him personally or by his world-wide fame, he was not the Rev. William Ashley Sunday. He was "Billy" Sunday, the walloping, scrapping preacher, who pounded his fists, who stripped off his coat as, at his revival meetings, he wrestled hand to hand with "hoons and the devil."

Billy Sunday met with scorn from some—whose dignity could not comprehend his simple, sincere faith. Such people he, in turn, scorned. And he was content to rest his record on the thousands who had come up the "sawdust trail" to meet, through him, a God who had always before seemed too distant to mean anything to them.

BORN IN LOG CABIN

"Billy" was born in a log cabin in Ames, Ia., on November 19, 1863, nearly 72 years ago. He never saw his father, who died of pneumonia while serving as a soldier in the Union Army. And his mother, unable to support him and her other two children on the pension she received from the government, sent "Billy" to an orphan asylum, connected with a soldiers' home.

"Billy's" first job was with an undertaker in Marshalltown, Ia.—and it was at that time that he embarked on the baseball career which brought him early fame—and gave him, likewise, that fighting manner and keen knowledge of slang and the way of the drunkard.

He played outfield on the Marshalltown team which won two state championships, and there met Captain "Pop" Anson of the old Chicago Colts. When "Pop" came home on a visit, he took "Billy" back to Chicago with him. From 1883 to 1890 "Billy" played professional ball.

COMING FROM SALOON

He was a ball-player—a hard fighting, hard drinking ball player. He was coming out of a saloon with some of his team-mates when the turn came in his life.

They stopped at a revival meeting in an open lot—stopped and listened to the message brought by another evangelist. Sunday was convinced of the truth the man spoke—was converted. He went on to his career of saving souls, and the other players, as he used to say, "went on to drunkards' deaths."

Those early years, perhaps, made Sunday the great preacher that he was.

In 1888 he married Helen Thompson of Chicago, the "Ma" Sunday who managed his evangelistic career. And "Billy" always insisted that he never made a decision without consulting her.

What Billy Sunday May Be Doing in Heaven

Kansas City, Nov. 7 (AP)—Heaven for Billy Sunday meant a handshake with Jesus, a visit with "Aunty Griffith" and consolations for Joseph, who got a "rough deal down there in Egypt."

He said so here 19 years ago from his revival pulpit.

"I think I know what I'll do when I get to heaven," said the fiery evangelist, who died last night.

"I'll go up and shake Jesus by the hand. I'll say: 'Jesus, thank You; I'm glad You honored me with salvation. I'm glad You honored me with the privilege of preaching Your Gospel. I wish I could have done better. But I did my best, and now, Jesus, I'd like to see old Aunty Griffith.

"She'll say: 'How are you, William?' When did you leave the earth?"

"'Last night,' Granny.'

"'I'm awful glad to see you, Willy, and I live right next door to you, Mon.'

'I'LL SEE JOSEPH'

"'Good, Granny, I knew Jesus would let you in.

"And then I'll ask to see Abraham and I'll ask 'Where are your boys?' and he'll take me around and introduce me to Isaac and I'll say:

"'Howdy do, Isaac, where is Jacob?'

"'Hello, Joseph; say old man, that was a rough deal they tried to put over on you down in Egypt, when that woman tried to tempt you and you looked her square in the face and pushed her away. Say, Joseph, I like you.'

"I'll walk all over God's Heaven and think of the people I'll meet there. Think of sitting down on the bank of the river with Peter, James and John, Andrew, Philip and the others. Think of talking with Zaccheus and blind Bartimeus, the daughter of Jairus, and the wild man out of whom the legion of devils were cast.

'THE FOLKS'LL COME'

"And we'll gather around with a lot of folks from Kansas City and other places where I've preached and sing 'Brighten the Corner' and 'When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder.'

"And when I'll ask Jesus if He'll let me hang around the gate and be the first to welcome the wife and babies when they come in. And He'll say: 'You can sit right there, Bill, if you want to; it's all right.' And as they come one after another I'll be there to welcome them.

"'Hello, Helen! Hey, George! Hey, Will! Hel, little Paul! Come on.'

"And they'd ask where I live and I'd take them over to our mansion. I never like to think about heaven as a great big tenement house where they put hundreds of people under one roof like we do in these big cities down here. 'In my Father's house are many mansions.'

"And, oh, what a goo dtime we'll have in heaven!"

'REDS' BARRED IN BANDSTAND

tion Movement was sponsored by Communists.

"The bandstand will remain shut to Communists," Herbert L. McNary, city license division chairman, declared today.

Use of Charles Street Mall for the demonstration tomorrow will be permitted, Chairman McNary said.

Investigation of the anti-war demonstration tomorrow had been requested by Mayor Mansfield. The radical squad report resulted.

Police also charge the National Student League and the League Against War and Fascism, which seek to participate in the demonstration, are linked with Communists.

SILENT ON THESE

No mention was made of other organizations which sponsor the movement. They are: National Students Councils of Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Associations, Committee on Militarism in Education, Atlantic Division of Interseminary Movement, American Youth Congress, Intercollegiate Council, all of which are members of National Student Federation of America.

LYNN POLICE OPEN WAR ON SCHOOL BETS

Taking their tip from Mayor J. Fred Manning, members of the Lynn police vice squad today declared open warfare on race track bookies and number pool writers.

The drive was officially launched after Chief James H. Broad and Sergeant-Detective Lawrence Nihan, head of the vice squad, held a long conference concerning gambling conditions in Lynn.

Both admitted that the warfare has been started because of the revelation of Mayor Manning that he had evidence race track and number pool racketeers were preying on children and getting rich on school children's recess pennies.

For weeks it has been common talk in Lynn that boys and girls of high school age were spending their money on pool numbers and that many high school students were playing the horses.

In many cases the luck of the youngsters was running fairly good and they were appearing with large rolls of bills that had been their winnings from the bookies and the number writers.

But there were those who were not making any winnings, either at the track or by the number pool, and money given them by the parents had disappeared.

Finally some of the mothers and fathers discovering what had happened obtained the names of the racketeers' agents and reported conditions to Mayor Manning.

The mayor said that he knew who the number writers and bookies were and that he would demand their arrest.

Chief Broad declined to discuss the mayor's revelations.

He admitted, however, that members of the vice squad would begin an immediate clean-up of bookies and number writers.

Finds Birthday in Bed to Be Lots of Fun

Birthday in bed isn't much fun when you're only nine. But Mary Ann Woodworth, convalescing at Cambridge City Hospital after an operation for appendicitis, is happy today, thanks to a surprise party arranged by nurses who prepared this big birthday cake with nine candles.

Father of Slain Son Aids Accused

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 7 (AP)—Uncertainty of the future remained to haunt Mrs. Daisy Alexander Root today as she awaited a hearing on the charge of slaying her husband, Brenton Root, 32, in a jealous rage.

In a pelting rain yesterday she attended the last rites for the husband she is accused of shooting after an argument over a night club cigarette girl, Lucile Underwood.

Mrs. Root heard herself described by the Rev. James J. Walker as "the embodiment of a denatured social order," and her husband, as the victim of a "corrupted" society. Under guard, she was returned to jail.

The father of the dead man, the Rev. Benjamin Franklin Root of Chicago, sat during the rites with an arm about her. He offered her a home and "the love of a father."

Ends Life With Shotgun

Caribou, Me., Nov. 7 (AP)—Jerry Watson, 60, a widower, killed himself here today with a shotgun charge fired into his mouth. Dr. H. F. Kelloch, medical examiner, pronounced it suicide.

Speeders Get 'Death Copy' Sentences

Portland, Me., Nov. 7 (AP)—Two motorists convicted in municipal court of speeding today were granted probation on condition they copy in longhand a magazine article on the horrors attending automobile deaths.

Both drivers, John F. Lovering and M. L. Royal, the latter of Gorham, were fined $20 which they can save if they turn over their copy to Police Sergeant Frederick D. McKenney by Friday morning.

The unique sentence was imposed by Recorder Harry C. Libby as a contribution to the highway safety campaign launched recently by Governor Louis J. Brann.

6-Hour Day Wages Boosted

Battle Creek, Mich., Nov. 7 (INS)—W. K. Kellogg sprung a surprise on employes of his plant today, announcing an average wage increase of 12½ per cent for all male workers on a six-hour day working basis.

"We shall never solve the unemployment problem by made-work, by the dole or appeals to patriotism," he observed. "The six-hour day with wages raised to compensate for the shorter working period is the only solution."

Helena Plans Shock Proof Homes

Helena, Mont., Nov. 7 (AP)—Quake-resisting construction was planned today as the solution to rebuilding problems of shaken Helena, where eight deaths have been laid to the recurrent tremors.

Scores of civic leaders formed the Helena Development Company to build immediately 50 four- to six-room dwellings, designed to withstand earth tremors.

Sunday Won Thousands in 1916

Billy Sunday was a familiar and admired figure in Boston, which he made the scene of two of his most successful revival meetings.

His first appearance in Boston came in 1916 when he conducted a three-month revival which, in his own words, was the "best campaign for religion ever conducted under the Stars and Stripes."

At that time he pitched his rude but serviceable tabernacle on the old Huntington avenue ball grounds and the city literally went wild over him.

His meeting here broke all records for the country at the time.

The famous evangelist recorded 60,509 trail-hitters, a good 2000 more than were recorded in his next largest campaign in Philadelphia.

Boston's free will offering to him was exactly $50,828.64. His collections for expenses totaled $90,436.75.

Attendance at his tabernacle on the final day of the revival was 42,000 and of these 5186 hit the sawdust trail.

His next revival here was early in 1931 when he staged a two-week series of revival meetings at Tremont Temple.

STOP THAT COLD

THE FIRST DAY!

A cold once rooted is a cold of danger! Trust to no makeshift methods. A cold, being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. A cold also calls for a COLD treatment and not a preparation good for a number of other things as well.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is effective treatment for a cold. It is expressly a cold tablet. It is internal and definite—and it does four important things. It opens the bowels, combats the infection in the system, relieves the headache and fever, and tones and fortifies the system. Don't be satisfied with anything less. Get Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine at any druggist's. Ask for it by the full name and accept no substitute on any pretext.

Race Tipster Drive Pushed

New York, Nov. 7 (INS)—Thomas F. Ward, chief investigator for the rackets bureau, has been sent to Albany to direct the statewide inquiry into racketeering at race-tracks, Attorney-General John J. Bennett's office announced today.

Accompanied by two special aides, Ward left yesterday to continue presentation of testimony to the Saratoga grand jury at Ballston Spa, which it was hoped would lead to indictments.

YAWN FOR BEAUTY

Paris, Nov. 7 (US)—If you want to be beautiful, girls, if you want to stay young—why yawn! That's all—just yawn. But do it even though you must invite politicians to dinner to supply the boredom.

This is the "recipe for beauty" of the famous French musical comedy star, Mistinguette, heroine of France's counter-espionage service during the World War. Now over 60 she still looks 25 and is reputed to have "the most beautiful legs in the world."

She has stayed young longer than any French woman since Sarah Bernhardt. She said in an interview:

"I've done it by yawning. Yawning is the greatest beauty treatment ever known.

"American girls are supposed to have the most beautiful legs in the world, but they play tennis, swim and do all sorts of things to get them. All I do is yawn.

"Yawning stretches every muscle. It keeps you alive and young. It's a recipe for youth as well as beauty.

Headline Contest Award Date Set

Names of the Headline Contest winners are to be published in Monday's editions of the Boston Evening American.

For the best 14-letter caption above a photograph of Betty Field, leading lady of the laugh hit, "Three Men on a Horse," now playing at the Plymouth Theater, the Boston Evening American will give a $10 award.

Ten pairs of tickets to Alex Yokel's surprise success will be awarded to ten other winners.

CAN YOU SOLVE THIS LOVE PROBLEM?

Can you solve love problems?

Then try to solve the one presented in Eleanore Mcherin's newest and most appealing serial of a girl who has all the odds against her in her fight for love. This story, "I Want You Only," starts in Monday's Boston Evening American.

It is the problem of Nell Doran, the heroine. She is a stenographer, the sole support of her family, which includes a worthless stepfather, a weak mother, an embittered old maid sister and a beloved small step-brother. She loves a young man she calls "Ricky," who is ambitious, but jobless. Finally a letter arrives offering "Ricky" employment in a distant city. He urges her to marry him and go there with him—to take love before it passes her by. Nell weighs the problem—should she take love and "Ricky" or duty and the burdens of those weaker ones dependent on her?

What do YOU think?

Write your solution to Nell Doran's problem to the Love Problem Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square. Your letter must not exceed 200 words.

For the best solution, the Boston Evening American will pay $10; for the next best, $5, and there will be ten $1 prizes. For every letter published the Boston Evening American will present the writer with a pair of tickets to George White's Scandals, opening Monday night at the Boston Opera House.

BLAST VICTIM AID PLANNED IN MILWAUKEE

Milwaukee, Nov. 7 (US)—Milwaukee's common council has set in motion machinery for the relief of innocent sufferers in the explosion Sunday, of the dynamite nest of Hugh ("Idzy") Rutkowski, 20, mad hoodlum, with Communistic inclinations.

South Side residents in dire need as a result of the destruction caused by the blast which killed Rutkowski, a fellow bomb terrorist and a nine-year-old neighbor girl, will be cared for by the local Red Cross chapter.

Others, under a resolution adopted by the council, will be assisted by a fund to be solicited by a special citizens' committee, with the aid of city departments.

Milwaukee's public works and other departments also were directed to co-operate in restoring homes damaged over a half mile square area in the explosion which occurred, apparently, as Rutkowski was working on a "super bomb" to carry out his threats of further terrorism.

Although inclined to believe that Rutkowski and his companion Paul ("Shrimp") Chavanek, 16, were the only members of the gang which had bombed three public buildings and two banks before they themselves were blown to bits, police continued investigating possibilities others were still at large.

He Didn't Go for Walk on Day Off

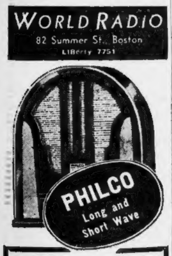

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 7 (INS)—Suss S. Scalo, Bridgeport substitute mail carrier, was in Fairfield County jail today awaiting trial on charges of destroying mail which, according to his story, he "did not have time to deliver."

Scalo, according to police, burned numerous letters at his home because he was afraid to admit to superiors that he could not complete his deliveries.

"My 'Round-the-World Honeymoon"

Venice, City of Romance, Highlight Of Mary Curley's Bridal Trip

July Fourth Celebrated in Munich With Traveling Americans

(This is the fifth installment of the Journal of Mary Curley Donnelly's 35,000-mile wedding trip. The sixth installment will be published in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

By ANN MARSTERS

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

We had Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly almost at the end of their wedding trip around the world, but today we are back in Munich again.

"There are so many things of interest that I haven't mentioned," said young Mrs. Donnelly, who is still more frequently referred to as Mary Curley—the first lady of the State.

"Suppose we retrace our steps and tell about the wonderful Fourth of July Eddie and I had in Germany.

"When we arrived in Munich, from Berlin, we saw a sign which announced that there would be a celebration for Americans that evening in one of the hotels.

"So we located the hotel and found 200 Americans all in a festive mood and shooting off firecrackers in the name of Independence.

Made Friends

"There's such a warmth of feeling between Americans where they're all so far away from home, and Eddie and I made a lot of friends that night. The next day we gave a big luncheon at our hotel for them."

And now the Donnelly's would take us on to Venice, the city of romance, the city that was built by romantic merchant folk with a pagan sense of beauty.

In Venice, Mary and her husband found the lore of the world in the air, and they lingered here for five weeks—the longest stay of their journey.

"It was one of the few places we visited that was not disappointing in any way," she said. "Everyone has a preconceived notion of what a place will be like, and Venice exceeded our expectations.

"Life is at a slower tempo, and everyone seems carefree and happy. You get caught in that atmosphere, and you don't feel the need of doing anything but relaxing and enjoying yourself.

"They seem to have found a very pleasant way of really being alive instead of just existing. Perhaps it's the result of so much sunshine and beauty.

Wed to Sea

"We were very fortunate to be in Venice on the day of Redintori, a festival held one night every year which symbolized the wedding of the Doge, their ancient ruler, to the sea.

"The custom arises from the fact that the whole life of Venice depends upon the sea, so one night a year the people of Venice pay tribute to what the sea means to them.

"On that night, everybody in Venice goes out on the water and from every gondola, fireworks shoot into the air. Each gondola is colorfully lighted and they are so thick you wonder how they can navigate. They go back and forth in all directions, steered by the rythmic motions of the singing gondolieri.

"Eddie and I went out in a big river boat from the hotel and watched the fireworks which kept on nearly all night."

There are many things for the Donnellys to remember about Venice besides the festival night, and one is the Max Rheinhart's production of "The Merchant of Venice."

"Seeing that production in its natural setting is one of the most memorable things of the whole trip," said Mary.

Saw Titians

"It was held out of doors and no artificial setting or lighting was needed. There were the actual gondolas coming through the canal, and Shylock crossing the bridge in actual moonlight.

"The huge audience was held breathless through it all."

Venice also offered Mary and Edward Donnelly the sight of the Titian exhibition which had been assembled from all over the world.

"I believe," said Mary, "that practically all of Titian's known paintings were in the collection, which was valued at $40,000,000. The exhibition was held in one of the old palaces, and it attracted an unusual amount of people to Venice."

So much for Venice. Shall we go to Rome, Egypt, India?

Loved Bazaars

"There's a lot to be said about Cairo," said Mrs. Donnelly. "Four one thing, there is the museum, 85 per cent of which is King Tut's tomb. There is a billion dollars worth of it, and whatever parts of it have been shipped to America or elsewhere, are considered negligible and are ridiculed by the Egyptians.

"J. P. Morgan offered $30,000 for the Sarcophagus—one of the solid gold coverings of the tomb with a replica of King Tut's face on it. (He was a very handsome young man.) There are eight coverings in all, and the outer one is as large as five or six rooms.

"We loved the bazaars in Cairo and we bought quite a few things—mostly Oriental costumes and perfumes.

"It was surprising to see so many of the old customs still existing, such as the Turkish dress of the women—veils and all.

"Part of the fun of shopping in Cairo was the haggling and dickering with the merchants. They jack up the prices, when they see you coming, to about 10 times more than they expect to get. They expect you to haggle with them, and they wouldn't have any respect for you if you didn't."

Mary bought a Turkish costume with a long black veil and a silver and black scarf to drape about her head. And Eddie bought a Mohammedan costume. They are saving them for a masquerade.

600 WOMEN WIN WPA PAY FIGHT

After four weeks of payless paydays, during which many of them were forced to beg for food, 600 women employed on the WPA sewing project at the Army Base today received checks for $27.50 each.

Part payment of the wages owed the destitute women resulted from a petition sent Monday to WPA Chief Harry L. Hopkins in Washington.

This petition, signed by scores of the women, set forth the unbearable hardships imposed by the Raw Deal on helpless persons compelled to turn to it for enough to eat.

Included was the fact that aged widows, who lacked even carfare, were forced to walk daily from most distant parts of the city to Army Base under threat of immediate discharge if they failed to report.

Hopkins was also told how women, some of them in delicate health, had managed to live through the month on $6 the WPA paid them October 10.

It was by begging, borrowing and sharing crusts that they were able to keep body and soul together, they said.

HAPPINESS LIVES IN MEMORIES

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Of course, Mrs. Mary Curley Donnelly and her husband, Lieutenant-Colonel Edward C. Donnelly, need no reminder now of the thrills and the happiness of their 35,000-mile wedding trip around the world. But they find a great deal of pleasure, just the same, in this mammoth scrapbook, crammed from cover to cover with newspaper photographs and stories, published here at home and in various countries which they visited.

VIOLETS IN BLOOM

Tra La, It's Spring in Connecticut

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 7 (AP)—Spring flowers are abloom in Connecticut.

Joseph Johnston of Reynolds Bridge picked 14 dandelions in his yard. He said there were many more.

Irving E. Manchester of Winsted picked a white and blue violet on a lawn there and William S. Hawley plucked a bunch of violets in a meadow in Washington and reported several "Quaker Ladies" in bloom.

Miss Wilhelmina Knowles of Washington said the hyla (peep frogs) were at it just like in the spring.

These towns are widely separated.

20 Face Cigarette Tax Indictments

Indictments of 20 or 30 men and women for the sale of untaxed cigarettes and tobacco, will be returned by the federal grand jury, it was learned today.

Internal revenue officers recently seized machinery and tobacco and cigarette products valued at thousands of dollars in seven manufacturing plants. They also found a quantity of used revenue stamps which are alleged to have been fraudulently used.

NOV. 15 MYTHEN INQUEST DATE

Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster of municipal court today set November 15 as the date for formal inquest into the mystery death of Bobby Mythen of Winthrop, supposed victim of a strange cult on Beacon Hill.

The chief justice, after he had received the names of 19 witnesses from District Attorney William J. Foley, assigned Judge Francis J. Good to hear the inquest evidence.

Young Mythen vanished last Christmas Eve, when he and two companions went to Beacon Hill to hear the carol singers. Three months later his body was found floating in the Charles River.

MILLEN REWARD STIRS BATTLE

While Executive Council members today considered recommendations for the division of the $22,000 Millen-Faber reward, a possibility of legal action by some of 10 disappointed claimants was seen.

Public Safety Commissioner Paul G. Kirk has submitted two plans for division of the reward to the Governor and council.

One plan names seven civilians and four police officers, while the second names only the civilians in case the council holds that police officers are not entitled to share in the reward.

Walter H. Mills, of Dedham, a disappointed claimant, who asserts his suggestion on tracing the battery in the holdup car led to the capture of the trio, indicated the possibility of an injunction.

"I've been given a fine tossing around in Colonel Kirk's recommendations," he declared today.

Olympic's Ex-Skipper Dies

Woking, Surrey, Eng., Nov. 7 (AP)—Captain Walter Henry Parker, 66, former commander of the liner Olympic, who retired in 1929, died today.

HARVARD GROUP VOTES PACIFIST

A majority of Harvard students attending a peace meeting in the New Lecture Hall, at which prominent pacifists spoke, voted against supporting the United States in any war in which this nation may become involved.

Out of 500 attending the anti-war meeting, 264 voted on this question, and 145 voted that they would refuse to support the government in a war, no atter what the circumstances.

This is called the Oxford Pledge. The sponsors of the peace meeting took no stand one way or the other on this question.

The rally was Harvard's contribution to a nationwide students' demonstration which will reach a climax locally in a pacifist meeting on Boston Common tomorrow noon.

Shaun Kelly, football captain, presided at the Harvard meeting. The speakers included Oswald Garrison Villard, contributing editor of The Nation; Roger Baldwin, director of the Civil Liberties Union; Professor William L. Langer, and Dean Alfred C. Hanford.

READ WHAT HAPPENED TO A PRETTY, YOUNG STENOGRAPHER AND HER JOBLESS BOY FRIEND

"I WANT YOU ONLY"
BY THE AUTHOR OF "CHICKIE"

STARTS MONDAY IN THE BOSTON AMERICAN

HEROINE DARES CONVENTION FOR LOVE

When convention and love clashed, she threw aside convention for the bigger appeal to her heart.

Only a daring girl would fly in the face of society to win her objective, but Nell Doran dared in the attaining of happiness.

Such is the theme of the newest novel from the facile pen of Eleanore Meherin, who first gave us the exciting story of "Chickie" and the just as exciting story of "Chickie's Daughter."

In next Monday's Boston Evening American begins this newest story of a girl who defied convention to capture love during the depression.

"I Want You Only" is the title of the new novel, a story around one of the most amazingly real characters ever created by this brilliant author.

With Nell Doran, beautiful heroine of Miss Meherin's newest novel, you will sympathize and you will weep over her trials.

Begin "I Want You Only" in the Boston Evening American next Monday.

"Yes, She's Here, Madam!"

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Here's little Patricia Fanland of Rockland street, Roxbury, waiting for her mother to come for her at the Dudley street police station after her wailing plea, "I wanna go home," had been broadcast through use of two-way radio patrol cars. Mrs. Fanland recognized her daughter's voice. Officer Walter W. Trask is saying, "Yes, she's all right, madam, and right here ready to talk to you."

LOST BABY GIRL RADIOS MAMA

Police of the Dudley street station were still chuckling today over the unique use of their two-way radio system which returned a lost child to her mother.

Patricia Fanland, 2, of Rockland street, Roxbury, became lost and was taken to the station. She was placed in the radio room in an effort to entertain her.

But all Patricia did was howl that she wanted to go home. Her mother searched the neighborhood in vain, and then stopped a radio car.

Through the loud speaker came the wail of Patricia's voice. Her mother recognized it, and went immediately to the station.

Helen Ferguson to Go Under Knife

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 7 (AP)—Dark-eyed Helen Ferguson of the silent films will enter a hospital tomorrow for an operation necessitated by an accident 15 years ago.

The script called for Miss Ferguson to ride a spirited horse across a set. The horse reared. She was thrown and injured but finished the picture. A persistent ailment resulted.

ARMISTICE PARADE

Veterans to March Downtown

American Legion members will pay tribute to their departed buddies on Monday, Armistice Day.

Center of the day's exercises is a parade, starting at 2 o'clock, from Commonwealth avenue and Hereford street to Commonwealth and Dartmouth street.

Brigadier-General William J. Rose, chief marshal, and his staff will head the marchers.

Among organizations participating are the 101st Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard, G. A. R. veterans, Marine Corps reserves, Naval reserves, United Spanish-American War Veterans, Veterans of Foreign Wars and American auxiliary units.

The line of march includes Arlington, Boylston and Tremont streets, Temple place, Washington, School and Beacon streets.

Governor James M. Curley is to review the parade from the State House and Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield from the City Hall. The staff reviewing stand is to be at Charles and Beacon streets.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce today issued a memorandum calling attention to the fact that only those business houses allowed by statute to open on Sunday may open between 7 a. m. and 1 p. m. on Armistice Day.

Most department stores and chain grocery stores are planning to open at 1 o'clock. Wholesalers have indicated their intention of closing, as are many factories. Security houses, banks and brokers in stocks, bonds, fruit, grain and produce are not open on Armistice Day.

In those towns where Sunday sports are legal, public games may be held after 1 o'clock on Armistice Day.

Music Students To Give Recital

Students at the Boston University College of Music will sponsor a recital tonight at Jacob Sleeper Hall, Boylston street, at 8 p. m. This will be the first student concert of the current season.

Participants include Herbert Ludwig, Fitchburg; Paul Attridge, George Attridge, East Pepperell; Robert King, Wakefield; Doric Alvani, Salem; Walter Abbott, Newton; Marion Hadley, Melrose; Mary Murtagh, Boston; Bernard Williams, New London, N. H.

'HUSH' WARNING AT TORCH TRIAL

Jail sentence for contempt of court face persons commenting on testimony during the "torch" murder trial of Frank and Anthony DiStasio, accused father and son.

Aroused over the outbreak of Mrs. Julia DiStasio, who screamed "That's a lie!" after Miss Ethel Reilly had testified against the two defendants, court officers today will ask Judge Brown to punish anyone making an outburst.

To enforce their plans to seize courtroom disturbers, Middlesex County officials provided three extra court officers.

During the past three days, large crowds, mostly strangers to the Middlesex County courthouse and some of them recognized as residents of Revere and East Boston have been appearing at the trial early to obtain front seats in the courtroom.

Rotch Due Back At Work Today

Arthur G. Rotch, state relief administrator, is expected back at his desk today after a day's illness.

Rotch became ill at his desk in the Park Square Building and had to be taken to his Commonwealth avenue home. Overwork was blamed.

The "Coolidge of the West"

BUDGET BALANCING DEMANDED BY LANDON; WARNS OF WASTE

GOVERNOR TELLS U. S. HOW KANSAS CUT SLUMP TAXES

By JOHN T. LAMBERT
Universal Service Correspondent

Cleveland, Nov. 7—Governor Alf M. Landon, the "Coolidge of the West," made his first bow outside of Kansas here last night and declared:

1—The United States should balance its budget.

2—It should abandon wild extravagances and fanciful theories.

3—It should get back to the sound, horse-sense method of doing business.

In the mad scramble to overcome the depression, Landon declared, the government structure is being torn down, the rich experiences of the past are being ignored and the people are being saddled with an enormous debt that will mortgage future generations.

Gov. Landon

He declared unsound fiscal policies have been the ruination of every great government in history.

He said the American people, like some of the people of Europe, are being urged to surrender their precious civil liberties in return for economic security, "without gaining economic security."

To go along this path, he declared, "would be disastrous to all American ideals and traditions."

Governor Landon was the principal speaker and guest of honor at the annual dinner of the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce. Unusual interest was attracted to him since his availability as the Republican candidate for President has commanded nation-wide attention.

His appearance was devoid of personal politics. He said he came as "sort of a traveling salesman for Kansas," to tell in simple, terse terms how Kansas has cut its taxes $73,000,000 in three years, taken care of its poor and maintained its government services to the people while the rest of the country has been suffering an enormous increase in taxes and debts. He said:

"It came to us with a sense of surprise that the happenings in Kansas during the past few years had awakened so much outside interest—that its record is considered phenomenal because its local subdivisions, city, county, school and township, have managed to live within their means, cut taxes and reduce bonded debt.

"If the situation in Kansas seems unusual, it is only because the type of government which the citizens have a right to expect has become the unusual in a day of theory and experimentation.

"What we have done in Kansas is what a sensible family does in the face of reduced income. We have cut out the frills.

"We have maintained essential services, but at minimum cost. We have insisted that every dollar buys more, not less, government. We have tried to run all departments on business principles and by business methods."

Governor Landon made no reference to any person in the national government by name but, by a simple statement of the facts, he repudiated the attack of Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins that Kansas "has not contributed a thin dime" for the care of its people.

Experience Teacher

He said that throughout 1933 and 1934, "according to the report of the national relief administrator," Kansas has contributed 30.6 per cent of all the funds spent there for relief. This, he said, is better than the record of 33 other states. Kansas people have thus been generous, he said, while their farms and properties have been ravaged by drouth and dust storms. He continued:

"Kansas has had the record of complying with every request of the national relief administrator and in co-operating fully in every way.

"We did not believe in putting relief into politics. We continued the relief administrator appointed by my distinguished Democratic predecessor, and he is on the job today.

"Despite the added burden for relief, the tax load in Kansas has been reduced."

Governor Landon said that the modern industrial state is complicated and has far outgrown its simple beginnings, but, he remarked:

"Does the fact that we have changed and grown make it wise to abandon the course which the wisdom of our forefathers charted for us, not out of theories, but out of the stern and bitter realities of economics and statesmanship?

"This country is beginning to learn that government cannot change its style as easily and with as little ill effect as men and women change styles.

"If the wind rips off the roof of a house out in our country, we don't tear down the walls also and abandon the whole structure.

"We put on a new and better roof, strengthening those parts which we have discovered to be weak.

"Similarly, we must not abandon what remains of our American institutions or jeopardize the remainder of our freedom simply because an economic storm has devastated our nation and shaken confidence.

"Rather let us replace what is destroyed, rebuild what is torn away, and in so doing strengthen our structure in every way that experience can suggest.

"Let us be certain that we are making only those changes which are real improvements—changes not dictated by wishful theory, but by the stern teachings of experience.

"Let us put experience, that greatest teacher of all, back on our government faculty."

Economy Ruled

Governor Landon said modestly that no official or political party is responsible entirely for the extraordinary savings that have been made for the Kansas taxpayers. He said the spirit of simple, effective economy dominated the officials on the several thousand taxing units in the state. He declared:

"This was not done by executive proclamation, nor by the legislative branch of the government placing itself in subjection to the will of the executive."

He said Kansas passed three effective laws: (1) The cash-basis law, "which prevents our spending what we do not have"; (2) a law to limit the total of taxes that may be appropriated; (3) a budget law, "which makes the building of governmental budgets a really democratic procedure, known to all, instead of a star chamber proceeding, known only to insiders and understood by only a few of those."

Taxation must be so guarded as not to destroy the income of the public, he declared. He said that when he is distressed by the problems of state, he stands before a mural in his office which depicts a prairie schooner drawn by yoked oxen, rumbling its way slowly across the plains, while beside it, unafraid and uncomplaining, trudge fathers, mothers and children. Beneath it is the poem of Whittier, which tells that they pilgrimage the West to make "the homestead of the free." Landon continued:

"How easy it is for that homestead to become the homestead of the bound and not the free—if bad government and unsound fiscal policies saddle the homesteader with a tax load he cannot carry.

"This is one of the major problems today in your state and my state and of the nation.

"The errors of other administrative policies may not of themselves be fatal, but the errors of an unwise financial policy have always been fatal to every government in the history of civilization."

Kansas has been through exceptionally hard times, he said. In addition to the economic depression, there have been the agricultural depression and the dry weather of three years, the worst since records have been kept. They have practised economy in government, he said, because "the state which first puts its house in order will be the first on the road to recovery."

Landon said that to him the most hopeful sign pointing to ultimate recovery is that the whole country is beginning to realize that a permanent solution of the farming problem is a national problem. Farming is a business, as much as manufacturing, and is entitled to equal protection in the domestic market, he said.

"It is not my place here to discuss the weakness or the strength of new policies in government.

"I shall not attempt to characterize them as successes or failures, or as revolutionary or evolutionary.

"For better or for worse such laws are here. We are faced with a condition of fact, not of speculative theory.

"So, the major task ahead in the main is not more laws, or more programs or more experimentation, but sound common sense.

"Even with the return of industrial activity, there will be major, social, farm and economic problems to meet. We must build against a return of what we have been through these past few years.

"We must build on the realization that this economic situation did not come upon us suddenly, nor will we get out of it overnight.

"But, as I said before, while the errors of other administrative policies may not of themselves be fatal, the errors of unsound fiscal policy have always been ruinous to every government in the history of civilization."

Governor Landon devoted himself seriously to the necessity of taking care of the poor and of solving the problems of today without leaving staggering debts for the rising generation. He said:

"We should remember that assistance to the needy unemployed is not, on the one hand, a privilege, or a vested right, nor, on the other hand, is it charity. It is a mutual responsibility—a common obligation created by the rapidity of our growth, the complexity of our society, and by our inability to cope successfully with situations as fast as they have arisen.

Must Aid Needy

"Every right thinking person sincerely desires to see the need for relief to the unemployed speedily pass away. Until that time comes, it is reasonable—and nothing less than just—that the government exert all its powers to prevent suffering among the less fortunate.

"There is no reason, however, why we should not attempt to accomplish this, as far as possible, on a pay-as-you-go basis. We will then pay for our own mistakes, which is as it should be. We should not expect our children to pay for them.

"Certainly an increasing public debt burden left by us to our descendants will lessen the ability of succeeding generations to meet their emergencies. The left-over problems of our times should not be added to the new ones of tomorrow. That is not fair to the coming generations and we evade our responsibilities if we thus pass on the burden. This generation will be the first to mortage the future in peace times.

"Furthermore, we should conduct our current fiscal affairs so that the public credit shall not be undermined. Common sense must prevail. No business can run very long and spend more than it takes in. If that should happen, the poor, the unemployed would be the first to suffer—for the government could no longer continue public aid."

Governor Landon said that in Kansas he and the people try to solve old problems without rash experiments which raise new problems. He said:

"We must not confuse the immediate glance with the long-time view.

"Some roads lead to far different ends than they seemed to take at the start.

"An innovation may be a backward step.

"This has been demonstrated in foreign countries where civil liberties have been yielded in return for economic security, without gaining economic security"

He said that the United States, particularly the West of today, was built on the faith, courage and homely common-sense virtues of thrift, toil and neighborly co-operation. He said that America's present problems will never be solved by a few so-called leaders but by the combined judgment and harmony and co-operation of all the people. He concluded:

"I bespeak for the citizens of these United States a lofty spirit of patriotism, a renewed devotion to our state and nation and their daily welfare, and a new birth of individual responsibility which shall make the safety, welfare and progress of the state and nation matters of each citizen's own personal concern."

Landon Advocates Rule By Experience for U. S.

Cleveland, Nov. 7 (US)—Governor Landon, in his address here last night, talked in plain, homely, incisive terms reminiscent of Calvin Coolidge.

Landon is shorter than the late President, but sturdier. He has a permanent brown-tan complexion, probably the heritage of his out-of-door life in the oil fields of Kansas and Oklahoma. He smiled readily.

Some of Landon's interesting statements:

"What we have done in Kansas is what a sensible family does in the face of reduced income. We have cut out the frills."

"The country is beginning to learn that government cannot change its style as easily and with as little ill effect as men and women."

"If the wind rips off the roof of a house out in our country, we don't tear down the walls also and abandon the whole structure."

"Let us put experience, the greatest teacher of all, back on our government faculty."

"The combined decision of the common people frequently approaches closer to applied wisdom than the intellectual superiority of so-called leaders."

"We have been through an exceptionally hard and trying period in Kansas. There are many improvements I would like to see made as soon as we can loosen our belt a little."

"It is the obligation of leaders to say 'Yes' to some proposals and 'No' to others in a manner that will not throw the country into jitters."

"The left-over problems of our times should not be added to the new ones of tomorrow."

CHANDLER'S WIN IN KENTUCKY A LANDSLIDE

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7 (AP)—Smiling, A. B. (Happy) Chandler, 37-year-old Lieutenant Governor who fought the state sales tax and supported the new deal, advanced to the governorship of Kentucky today on a Democratic majority approaching landslide proportions.

His margin over Circuit Judge King Swope, Republican who opposed him solely on state issues, soared to 51,459 as returns from 1544 of the state's 4219 precincts were tabulated.

The vote was Chandler 219,883 and Swope 168,424.

The trend indicated his final majority would be well over 100,000, a record for a gubernatorial race since reconstruction days.

Chandler, who urged a Democratic victory to "assure the re-election of President Roosevelt" in 1936, will be inaugurated in Frankfort next month, succeeding Governor Ruby Lafoon, a Democrat, famous for his "army" of colonels.

Lafoon bitterly opposed Chandler, but supported Roosevelt.

In their general election Tuesday Kentuckians rolled up a sizeable majority for repeal of their state prohibition amendment. With 1372 precincts counted, the vote was 133,452 for repeal and 105,659 against.

An amendment to authorize the Legislature to enact old age pensions was adopted by an overwhelming majority. Returns from 1332 precincts gave 198,950 for the amendment and 22,499 against.

Kentucky also elected a Democratic general assembly, but final returns were needed to determine the size of the majorities in the House and Senate. E. W. Creal, a Democrat, was elected Congressman in a special election in the fourth district without opposition. The entire Democratic state ticket was elected.

LAW MAY BAR OUSTED POLICE

Reinstatement of Peter P. Clougherty, discharged Boston police officer, requested by Police Commissioner McSweeney, today hinged on a question of law.

At a hearing, Civil Service Commissioner James M. Hurley declared before his department could approve re-instatement, it must be established the Boston police are employes of the city and not of the state, in view of the fact the police commissioner is appointed by the Governor.

Hurley pointed out that if it is decided the police are state employes, the Clougherty petition will fail.

Under the new law which authorizes re-instatement of discharged officers with approval of the Civil Service Commission, it was stressed, each officer must be an employe of a city or town.

Among those recording themselves in favor of the reinstatement were Joseph Walker, former Speaker of the House, and Deputy Police Superintendents James McDevitt and John Anderson.

Commissioner Hurley took the case under advisement.

District Customs Gain $3,626,673

A $3,626,673.08 increase of duties collected in the Massachusetts district during the first 10 months of this year was announced today by Joseph A. Maynard, collector of customs.

The district, including all sub-ports such as Worcester, Springfield, Gloucester, Fall River, brought in duties amounting to $19,829,948.51, compared to $16,202,-75.43 collected in the same period last year.

Must Take Oath Or Lose Diplomas

New York, Nov. 7 (INS)—High school students in New York city must swear loyalty to the U. S. Constitution and the federal and state governments before they receive their diplomas.

This ruling today came from the Board of Education, which made it clear that any student refusing to take the oath will be denied a diploma.

Boy, 3, Hit by Truck

Injuries which placed his name on the danger list at City Hospital were suffered today by three-year-old Edward Morris of Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, when he was struck by a truck in front of his home.

Yowling Cats Top Annoying Noises

By THE NOISE EDITOR

Apparently there are many persons in Greater Boston who are annoyed by noises.

Not only are they annoyed by noises, but they are annoyed by a variety of noises.

And so, being annoyed, they are writing in droves to complain about them to The Noise Editor of the Boston Evening American in the contest for free tickets to "Three Men on a Horse," and the capital award of $25.

The tickets are awarded one pair to each person whose letter, containing the writer's selection of the five noisiest noises, and means of abating them, is published in this newspaper—and there will be some published each day.

The $25 award will be made to the letter selected as the best out of all submitted and published.

Mrs. A. B. Hitchcock of 302 Commonwealth avenue, Back Bay, sends in a neat and concise letter, in which she says:

"I find that big noises are not nearly as annoying as smaller ones, which I am listing, with suggestions for abating them:

"1—Cats howling on the back-yard fence at night.

REMEDY—Save lemon skins to throw at them, rather than empty bottles.

"2—Roller-skating on cement pavements.

REMEDY—Nothing can be done in this generation, I fear, but birth control may make things easier for the coming generation.

"3—Rattling of cellophane wrappers on candy boxes at the theater.

REMEDY—Turn a spotlight on the offender.

"4—Sucking one's teeth.

REMEDY—Knock them out of the offender's head.

"5—Finger exercises played on the piano in the next apartment.

REMEDY: Try turning on your radio as a counter-irritant."

Then from Mrs. J. H. M. of Arlington comes a letter which lists her idea of noisiest noises as follows:

"1—Barking and howling of dogs under my bedroom window at 3 a. m.

"2—Early morning starting of my neighbor's roadster.

"3—Rattlings of the furnace by my neighbor upstairs.

"4—Slamming of doors by my own visitors.

"5—Noisy drinkers who let out whoops after each drink.

"You want to know what I would do to abate these noises. Well, if I were able to keep the dogs from under my window, I could stand the rest of the noises.

"For the others, I have considered (A) letting the air out of my neighbor's tires, (B) getting up at the same time as the upstairs man, (C) placing rubber linings around every door, and, (D) voting for repeal of the 18th amendment."

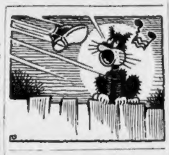

Dorothy Connor of 85 Baxter street, South Boston (are only women annoyed by noises?) sends the following:

"Noises most annoying to me are:

"1—Firecrackers; 2, Milkman's rattling bottle-holder; 3, Trolley wheels scraping on tracks; 4, Elevated roaring overhead; 5, Boisterous people at 12 midnight.

"There is nothing more annoying than a firecracker lighted under a tin can, to explode with a deafening roar outside one's window. They should be set off only at a designated spot.

"The milkman's wheels have been silenced by rubber tires, so why not rubber covering or padding on their wire milk-bottle carriers?

"Screeching of trolley wheels could be lessened by oiling tracks.

"As for the elevated racket overhead—remedy the matter by removing the structure.

"Loud people who feel gay turning street corners at 12 p. m. should be locked up for keeps."

Send in your idea of the five noisiest noises and what you think might be remedies. Address your letters, not over 200 words each, to The Noise Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

• Overeating • Run Down Condition
• Over Drinking • Rheumatic Symptoms
• Hyper-Acidity • Colds
It contains
Gluconate of Lime; A calcium compound which is organically assimilable supplementing the modern table diet so often robbed of organic minerals and deficient in Lime.
CALCIUM (or LIME) is perhaps the mineral most deficient in the average civilized diet. Calcium is important in the coagulation of the blood and regulation of the heart muscles. It acts as a governor of nervous reactions. Calcium is known to be of great assistance in correcting disturbance of acid-base equilibrium. Calcium is needed to make good bones and teeth, to develop the muscles and prevent fatigue. The importance of calcium in the eyes of scientists is growing every day.
Lime Gluconate is more acceptable and tolerated than any other form of Calcium.

LYONS SEEKS VOTE RECOUNT IN CAMBRIDGE

Refusing to concede defeat in the Cambridge mayoralty fight, John Lyons was engaged today in obtaining signatures for a recount petition.

Loser by 267 votes in the election Lyons turned his efforts toward obtaining 10 voters in each of the 11 wards to sign the papers.

Meanwhile the city was still "red hot" over the wildest campaign in its history.

Two state troopers and two Cambridge patrolmen maintained a 24-hour vigil over the vaults in the election commissioners' offices where the ballots are kept.

The guard will be maintained until the recount is held, probably on Saturday or Monday.

WAITS NEW FIGURES

Lyons refused to congratulate John D. Lynch, North Cambridge druggist and banker, on his apparent victory, claiming that the recount would reverse the announced figures.

Lynch had nothing to say about the forthcoming retabulation of the ballots.

Three precincts, according to Lyons, will give him the margin to overcome the 267 vote plurality now enjoyed by his rival Lynch.

"I have reason to believe," said Lyons today, "that there will be enough of a change in three precincts to give me victory."

Asked why he called Governor Curley late Tuesday night to get State police to guard the ballots, Lyons said:

"I called the Governor to have him assign State troopers to the election commissioners office to guard the vault to protect my interests.

FIGURES DIFFER

"I have every confidence in the individual members of the Cambridge police department, but I know, and the people of Cambridge know, of the close relationship between the chairman of the election commission and the chief of police.

"I have reason to believe that both were friendly to my opponent during the campaign."

Political observers drew a comparison between the primary and election in regard to the telephoned reports from precincts to headquarters, and claimed that the similarity was prophetic.

They pointed out that in the primary, telephoned reports gave Lynch a plurality of about 2800 votes, while the final figures showed over 3000.

In the recount, Lyons picked up over 300 votes and Lynch lost nearly the same amount.

"Donkey, Huh? Well! Well!"

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

It takes a pretty smart girl to make a donkey of Jimmy Cagney, magic or no magic, and here's our he-man hero doing extremely well for himself in spite of his grotesque masquerade in this scene from the screen version of Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream," opening tomorrow at the Majestic Theatre. Anita Louise, as Titania, is being softly feminine.

COMING TO 'DREAM'

Shakespeare Film Lures Notables

Hundreds of notables were flocking to Boston today for the premiere of Max Reinhardt's screen version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," a Warner Brothers' production.

The screen play opens tomorrow night at the Majestic theater.

Premieres in London and in New York were hailed as marking a new step in cinema art.

Warner Brothers have been working for two years to put on the screen a production which would be live enough for modern picture followers and yet cling to the Elizabethan tradition.

Crowds which have flocked to the showings of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" have justified their efforts. Besides holding rigidly to the classical play, the producers have woven in symphony and ballet.

The Shakespearean tradition of uninterupted performance is followed. Where Shakespeare's players had to play against plain backgrounds, modern screen science has given a colorful background to the film.

James Cagney, erstwhile gunman of the screen, has become one of the most capable actors in the difficult role of "Bottom."

Hollywood considers the play as the dawn of a new era, when the great masters of English literature will be put on the silver screen.

FACTS

Washington, Nov. 7 (US)—The Roosevelt administration has imposed taxation on the theory that ownership of wealth is in the hands of the few.

Statistics show two-thirds of the national wealth is controlled by the mass of the people.

Aggregate number of stockholders in 131 leading corporations in 1934 was about 9,400,000. Insurance policies in effect total 115,000,000. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has insured 56,000,000 individual bank accounts. More than 10,500,000 own city homes and 3,500,000 own farms.

HEARST POLICIES PRAISED

New York, Nov. 7 (US)—Praise for the editorial appeal of Hearst newspapers was voiced last night by Jack McCarthy, executive of the McCann-Erickson Company, in addressing the monthly meeting of the New York American advertising staff.

Speaking in the auditorium of the Feagin School of Dramatic Arts McCarthy said:

"The editorial formula of the Hearst newspapers has met with marked success and has not only endured but increased in popular appeal over a span of many years.

"Mr. Hearst seems to sense what the public wants. He is a courageous editor who does not fear to experiment."

Eddie Goulding Sells "Eternally Yours"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 7—Whenever Edmund Goulding comes through with a salable idea it's news. Eddie has ideas—a million a minute—but of course not all of them are practical.

"Eternally Yours" is one story that Irving Thalberg, who always listens to Eddie's outpourings, thinks not only practical but worthy to be put on the screen and in a big way.

Louella O. Parsons

Irving has just purchased this original Goulding yarn and is bringing Coningsby Dawson, famous writer, to prepare the screen play. That will give Eddie Goulding a chance to concentrate on direction and to help MGM locate the femme dramatic actress required.

Damon Runyon's play "A Slight Case of Murder" started off slowly in New York but it built and built. That is what happened to "Abie's Irish Rose" when it opened some years ago on Broadway. It didn't go particularly well, but it ended by becoming one of the biggest money makers the theater has ever known.

Of course, the name Damon Runyon is magic to his thousands of readers in the newspapers. Warner Brothers have purchased the film rights to Damon's play, and will produce it this coming season.

Not all the movie contracts are signed with struggle and strife. Kay Francis, whose contract had not expired with Warner Brothers, was handed a new one.

Jack Warner told her that she had accepted any story given her without a word and had always been gracious and lacking in unpleasant temperament, that he wanted to show his appreciation by handing her voluntarily a three-year contract.

Kay's picture, "I Found Stella Parish," her best picture in months, did a record business in New York. Jack says he hands orchids to "Hollywood Hotel" for the radio presentation which helped promote it.

The very important Metropolitan Opera Company, for the first time in the memory of man, has extended a singer's leave of absence in favor of the movies. Gladys Swarthout, who sings "Carmen" and who has not yet finished "Give Us This Night," with Jan Kiepura, has been given a six weeks' extension of time to permit her to finish her movie.

I am wondering if she will not be starred in "Carmen" for Paramount after she sings Bizet's opera. Para intended it for Marlene Dietrich but Marlene goes to England when she finishes her picture with Charles Boyer and Swarthout would be ideal for the part.

Thrilling news that James Hilton, author of "The Lost Horizon" and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," is coming to Hollywood to be the house guest of Frances Marion.

Frances met him in London and started to tell him about Frank Capra, who will direct his "Lost Horizon," but she found Hilton knew all about Hollywood and only wanted to come here to see it all for himself. His new book "And Now Goodbye," will be eagerly read and, of course, I suppose we'll be seeing it in the movies.

COUNTESS DI FRASSO and MARION PARSONETTE, radio genius, at the fights, they motored to Palm Springs Sunday after the Cantor broadcast to call on GRACE MOORE, who is improving; the ERNST LUBITSCHES have discovered Arrowhead Springs and are Sundaying there for the fourth consecutive week end. MURIEL BABCOCK, Universal Service movie writer, rushed to St. Vincent's Hospital for an emergency appendicitis operation; she came through nicely, everyone will be glad to know; PEGGY CONKLIN flying to New York to join her bridegroom. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Music Notes

With Concert-Master Richard Burgin conducting, Joseph Szigeti, celebrated Hungarian violinist, will appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra tomorrow afternoon and Saturday evening.

Mr. Szigeti's last appearance with the orchestra was in 1926. He will play the Violin Concerto of Prokofieff.

The famous Russian composer, Dimitri Shostakovitch, whose electrifying opera "Lady Macbeth of Mtsensk" has become one of the most controversial compositions in recent years, will be represented at these concerts for the first time by his First Symphony. The work has been performed by the orchestras in Philadelphia, New York, Cleveland, and Chicago with outstanding success.

The second half of the program will include Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," and Ravel's "Alborada del Grazioso."

Roland Hayes, returning to Boston concert halls after a long absence, will give a recital in Symphony Hall Sunday afternoon. The distinguished tenor will sing "Amadigi" (Ah, Spietol) "Ah, Implicable" and "Floridante, Alma Mia," by Handel; "Dichterliebe (Poet's Love,") by Schumann; "Yearning, I Wait Alone," and "Why?" by Tchaikovsky, "Over All the Hill Tops Is Rest," and "People Who Have Gardens," by Helen Hopekirk; and a cycle of songs by Negro poets and musicians.

Among the last group is the uncomparable "Crucifixion," one of the most impressive examples of the spiritual, and a real product of our Southern cotton plantations in the days before the Civil War.

The history of the music dates back to the old days of the African born ex-slave. Mr. Hayes learned it from a native of Africa who became a Christian preacher to Georgia slaves. This distinguished cleric sang his sermons, and one of them was "The Crucifixion." The notes which Mr. Hayes sings are exactly as he learned them from the old Negro preacher.

Isabel French, Boston soprano, and a favorite with music lovers here, will give a recital in Jordan Hall on Tuesday evening, November 19.

Crime Film

Opening Saturday at the Uptown is "Special Agent," Cosmopolitan's dramatic film story of the exciting activities of the United States Treasury Department operators. Bette Davis and George Brent have the star roles.

NOTIZIE DELLA GUERRA IN ITALIANO

By FORMER LIEUTENANT GIOVANNI NANIA

(The following is the Italian version of the war news appearing in English in other columns of this paper.)

IN AZIONE INTORNO A MACALLE'

Dopo due giorni di sosta causata in parte dalla pioggia addirittura torrenziale, le truppe italiane del Nord hanno ripreso stamane la loro marcia gloriosa verso Macalle', pronte a piombare sulla citta' e ad insediarsi vittoriosi in quella che e' considerata la piazzaforte d'Etiopia.

Le artiglierie italiane sono riuscite intanto ad inerpicarsi sulle cime scoscese a cavaliere della citta', pronte a far sentire la loro voce possente e devastatrice.

L'avanzata italiana si svolge su di un fronte di oltre 30 miglia con le tre colonne che formano il grosso delle truppe, circa 100.000 uomini, ammassate a ridosso delle montagne nelle immediate vicinanze della citta'.

La dislocazione delle colonne viene cosi riportata.

Al centro quella del generale Ruggero Santini, formata di Camicie Nere a sinistra la Divisione del generale Mariotti costituita do guerrieri dancali, e a destra la colonna di Ascari Eritrei comandata dal generale Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli.

Alla colonna del generale Santini si e' aggregata la banda di Ras Haile' Selassie Gugsa gia' governatore di Macalle' il quale ha disertato nel campo italiano ed e adesso ansioso di penetrare in Macalle' e potervi issare per primo la gloriosa bandiera italiana.

Appena avuto sentore dell'avanzata italiana, la popolazione civile di Macalle' ha evacuato prontamente la citta', lasciando indietro gl'ammalati e gl'invalidi.

Secondo rapporti pervenuti al Comando Italiano i guerrieri etiopici "in numero cosi' grande che non e' possibile stimare" si sarebbero ammassati ad Amba Alagi decisi a dar battaglia cola' ed a resistere fino a che non . . . saranno obbligati a scappare.

Con l'avanzata di oggi, tutta l'Etiopia del Nord, compresa fra i fiumi Takkaze e Gheva, e' adesso nelle mani italiane.

Si crede che Ras Seyoum, comandante delle truppe abissine del Nord, si trovi nella regione di Amba Alagi, intento a riorganizzare l'esercito e a curare l'ammassamento in quella zona di oltre 250.000 guerrieri con i quali affrontare l'esercito italiano.

Mentre in tutte le capitali europee le discussioni per il componimento della vertenza italo-etiopica continuano incessanti e senza alcun risultato positivo, Mussolini prosegue nella sua politica lungimirante escogitando nuove misure precauzionali contro ogni "eventualita'": Un nuovo decreto del Ministero della guerra dispone la chiamata alle armi di caporali di fanteria e di armi specializzate, compresi nelle classi dal 1900 al 1910. Gli uomini debbono presentarsi entro trenta giorni dalla chiamata e saranno impiegati per il servizio interno soltanto.

Le truppe finoggi trasferite nell' Africa Orientale si fanno ascendere a non oltre 290.000 uomini, forza sufficiente, secondo quanto si fa rilevare, a conquistare l'intera Etiopia.

Esaltando le gesta dei soldati italiani, i fascisti di tutte le citta' d'Italia gridano a gran voce che "ogni miglio quadrato occupato dai soldati in Africa, e' un miglio di meno di cui i diplomatici si debbono occupare nelle loro discussioni."

Il prossimo riassunto sulle vicende della guerra italo-etiopica, compilato in italiano dal ten. Giovanni Nania, apparira' sul Boston Evening American domani.

'Bounty' On Two Screens

"Mutiny on the Bounty," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's two million dollar production starring Clark Gable, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone, opens on the screen at Loew's State and Orpheum tomorrow.

[illegible] story is based on the real voyage of H. M. S. Bounty 150 years ago, a scientific expedition to the South Seas. It sets forth the tyranny of a brutal captain whose tortured sailors at last rebel, casting him adrift in an open boat.

Many of the mutineers escape to the now famous Pitcairn Island where 200 of their descendants live to this day.

Laughton has the role of the vicious captain, Clark Gable is the leader of the mutiny, and Franchot Tone appears as a loyal young midshipman.

Frank Lloyd, who directed "Cavalcade," handled the direction.

"The Crusades," Cecil B. De Mille's historical epic of the great religious wars of the 10th century, opens its first engagement at popular prices at the Metropolitan tomorrow.

The spectacular production has Loretta Young as the lovely Princess of Berengaria, who reluctantly married Richard of England on the eve of his departure for the Holy Land. Henry Wilcoxon is the lion-hearted king and other featured performers are Ian Keith, Katherine De Mille, C. Aubrey Smith, Joseph Schildkraut and Alan Hale.

On the stage at the Met tomorrow the famous "Three Sailors" and Gus Van of the celebrated Van and Schenck team, headline the musical revue, "Buccaneers."

Added features of the footlight production are pretty Carmen Marsh, Al Siegel's newest star discovery, and Bob Burns, the famous Arkansaw Traveler, comedy headliner on the Vallee and Whiteman radio programs.

The Met's popular and talented Elida Ballet and Fabien Sevitzky, and the Grand Orchestra in a new musical presentation are other stars of the new program.

Scollay's Bill

Starting tomorrow at the Scollay, Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray will star in Paramount's "Hands Across the Table," one of the most entertaining and diverting of the season's comedies. Ralph Bellamy, Astrid Allwyn and Marie Prevost are featured in the cast.

The companion picture on the bill will be "Personal Maid's Secret," Warner Bros. comedy featuring Margaret Lindsay, Anita Louise and Ruth Donnelly.

Escaped Lifer Wants to Go Back

Providence, R. I., Nov. 7 (AP)—Arraigned in Superior Court on an assault charge, William Johnson, 40, of Harrisburg, Pa., today readily admitted that he is an escaped convict from a Georgia prison camp, where he was serving a life sentence for murder under another name.

He said he wanted to go back.

Fashion and Beauty Partners

By ANNICE BRINK

EVERY TIME you draw on these trig kidskin gloves piped and stitched in white—you give your hands a beauty treatment. Isn't that something to count on with raw winter weather ahead that spells danger to the smooth surface of your hands? The gloves are treated with a fragrant cream, though you'd never guess it. They're perspiration proof and washable. Actually the most feminine things in gloves ever. Several styles and colors are to be had. Miss Barbara Keith of Brookline models for us. For shopping information on the gloves, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her.

An Ace Versus the King-and-Queen

By MRS. CULBERTSON

Anyone who ever bid a Slam knows how difficult it is to find out whether partner's strength in a suit consists of the Ace or of the King-Queen combination.

The King-Queen is worth one honor-trick, just as the Ace is, and in the play of an average hand will often win two tricks, whereas the Ace can never more than one.

But when bidding for a slam there is all the difference in the world.

If two suits are headed by King Queens, the opponents have two Aces and can stop a slam in the first two tricks.

If one of those suits is headed by an Ace, declarer is assured of an opportunity to get the lead at once and to go about developing the necessary 12 tricks in another suit.

The Four Five Notrump Convention has done much to overcome this difficulty since a conventional four-notrump bid shows at least two Aces and a five-notrump response to a four-notrump bid shows the other two Aces.

Sometimes the five-notrump response can never come into the bidding because the four-notrump bid cannot be made.

In desperation, a player who wanted to find out about some Aces, bid four notrump on the hand below when he had no right to. His initiative was rewarded.

South Dealer
North and South vulnerable

	North
	♠ 4 10 4 3 ♡ 3 ♢ A 7 6 2 ♣ 9 7 4 2
West ♠ K Q 9 ♡ 9 5 4 2 ♢ K J 10 ♣ 10 8 3		East ♠ J 7 6 5 2 ♡ 10 ♢ Q 9 8 5 4 ♣ A 5
	South ♠ 8 ♡ A K Q J 8 7 6 ♢ 3 ♣ K Q J 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡ (1)	Pass	1 ♠ (2)	Pass
3 ♣ (3)	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
4 N T (4)	Pass	5 N T	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Though his hand contains a practically sure game South cannot open with a forcing two-bid which is a very dangerous bid on hands containing less than [illegible] honor tricks.

(2) A One-over-One response on such a weak suit is the proper bid with fairly strong hands containing about two-honor tricks.

(3) South fails to rebid his heart suit immediately in order that he may make a rebid which is forcing to game.

(4) Knowing that North has about two honor tricks, South is [illegible] of a Slam if they are Aces but he knows that if North has, for example, the Spade K Q rather than Spade A, then East and West have two Aces and can win the first two tricks.

After North's five-notrump response had placed the two Aces in his hand, South was assured [illegible] an even chance to [illegible] North [illegible] those Aces.

[illegible] West opened the King of spades, which the Ace won.

Since the Slam probably could not be made unless the clubs were divided three-two, South drew trumps and then laid down the King of clubs.

The club Ace was the only trick East and West could make.

No Rules REGARDING Wedding GIFTS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Recently I received an invitation to a church wedding but not to the reception. I am a friend of the bride-to-be's sister. Do you think I should buy a wedding gift?

2—I am going to be married the latter part of next month at Mass about 9 o'clock in the morning. The maid of honor and I are going to wear fall suits and there will be a breakfast at a hotel following the marriage. This breakfast will be for the immediate wedding party. Shall I send out invitations for the church wedding?

3—The same evening my mother intends to have an informal reception at her home for our friends and relatives. Is this good form?

1—I'm sorry that there are no definite rules and regulations to give you concerning the sending of a wedding gift. It quite naturally narrows down to the fact that we should send a gift if we wish to, and needn't send one if we don't wish to.

You did receive the compliment of being sent an invitation to the ceremony but since you did not receive an invitation to the reception, it indicates that you don't know the bride very well. However, out of compliment to your friend, the bride's sister, you might wish to send a wedding gift, even though not a very important one.

2—The invitations to your informal wedding should be informal notes, written by your mother who is to be hostess. Or, if the number of your guests is very small, perhaps you and your mother would like to ask the guests by word of mouth.

3—Yes. It isn't usual to have the reception so many hours after the ceremony but it is thoroughly proper, and in many instances is by far the most convenient time for the greater number of guests.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

TREATMENT SET HAS ALL SKIN REQUISITES

Rare Introductory Offer

By ARLINE GOULD

IT IS sometimes fun to be fooled, but if you really find that it's more fun to know, here's the pay-off in an ingenious new bet.

It's a splendid treatment set, and if you don't find a place for it in the family budget along with food and firewood and the other necessities of life, then you don't know a bargain when you see one.

If you've been led to believe that all kits are pretty much alike—pretentious but very expensive—you have never been on a shopping tour with this department.

Not only is this kit one of the nicest we have seen, but its six sterling preparations (all for the price of one) should make it a joy of women who can't ordinarily afford costly toiletries.

These same preparations are usually so expensive that offered as they are in a special introductory set, they possess all the charm of fruit out of season. You don't stand a chance of being fooled here—not even if you bought the items singly.

The set comprises the basic treatment of one of the more famous Fifth avenue salons. Included is a fragrant creamy fluid skin cleanser, a skin tonic prized for its stimulating value in clearing the skin, a skin food containing the rich elements for the tender tissues around the eyes and throat and an oil-base astringent remarkable for its firming, tightening qualities.

In addition is a generous sized box of fine-textured face powder (there are six lovely shades) and a vivid, pagan lipstick which is highly indelible.

If you should be looking for preparations of the highest quality at minimum expense, do investigate this set. Its chief appeal lies in the sterling preparations within—not merely in its case.

The oil-base astringent is "tops" in its line. Carefully prepared from aged herb solution, it will not only restore firmness to the outer skin layer, but with constant use will perpetuate a lasting firmness to the inner tissues. It is delightfully fragrant, but we are told that its odor does not come from added perfume, but from sweet flower oils which are incorporated to preserve the skin.

To learn the name of this special introductory treatment set which goes on sale at a Boston shop for a limited time only, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Question—Is it true that oily cosmetics promote the growth of superfluous hair? I have a light down on my face which is most objectionable. How can I get rid of it? Also, please tell me what causes unwanted hair to appear on women's faces?

Mrs. Donald A., Boston.

Answer: It's just a ridiculous [illegible] that oily cosmetics promote the growth of superfluous hair. Electric needle experts say that some of the worst cases are presented by women who have never used cosmetics at all. If a cream would make hair grow there would be no bald-headed men. It is believed that superfluous hair is caused by some ductless gland that is not functioning. Since the growth of hair on your face is a light one, why not try bleaching it? Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for my superfluous hair leaflet, which contains a recipe for a bleach and also gives hints on removing unwanted hair.

Glittering Girl -:- By May Christie

CHAPTER XXXIII

He changed the subject brusquely. "Look—over there—isn't that Henson trying to attract your attention?"

Nan knew she had said enough—more than enough. She gurgled. "Why, of course that's 'Foggy.'" She waved to him. He came over.

"Going to the Van Tyles' reception tonight, Nan?" Foggy inquired. "If [illegible] I'd be proud to escort you."

"[illegible]" she smiled [illegible] him. "This [illegible] Terry [illegible] ahead of you. He's taking me tonight."

Which was [illegible].

But Terry had accepted the Van Tyles invitation. They were old friends of his. It would be churlish to decline to escort Nan, since she put it in that way.

Crestfallen, "Foggy" departed. He was a very rich, albeit a very homely looking youth, and unaccustomed to being turned down by impecunious damsels. His small piggy eyes blinked short-sightedly and irritably as he returned to his table.

"The white rabbit's disappointed. Isn't he the ugliest ever? He's quite crazy about me," Nan chuckled.

"You flatter me by picking on me as an escort," Terry said. Was it her fancy, or was there decided sarcasm in his voice?

Nan Wants Terry

No time to lose. He might be swept from her at the Van Tyles. With all her shallow little heart, she told herself she wanted Terry.

"There isn't anyone in the world I'd sooner go with." She plucked a big yellow marigold from the vase in the center of the table, and started to pull off its petals, whispering very softly—but Terry heard it. "He loves me—he loves me not."

"Destructive child!" But there was an amused look in Terry's eyes that Nan mistook for tenderness.

"I wish I were destructive really!" She took a deep breath and plunged right in. "I wish I could destroy your peace of mind, Terry darling. You're so self-contained—and yet under it all—under your masterful ways—you could be most loving and devoted. You're the faithful kind. There aren't many in this town. The girl you'd care for would be terribly lucky!"

"You flatter me. A man like Henson would be a much better bet. He could give a girl every material thing she fancied."

"Bah! As though money mattered in the least!" cried Nan, [illegible]

who had already satisfied [illegible] that there was [illegible] in Terry's [illegible] desert [illegible]

He [illegible] That [illegible] made him think of Vernon Tyson. What an encounter [illegible] they had [illegible] Once [illegible] had [illegible] novel [illegible] those [illegible] scenes. His heart ached when he thought of that [illegible].

Mud on Skirts

For mud now clung to her dainty skirts—mud from that Karinoff affair.

"I have an appointment. I must go. I'll call for you at 9 tonight, Nan," he said brusquely.

She did not argue his departure. "I've scared him, but the idea's planted, and will grow," she told herself as she smiled sweetly at him.

* * *

It was exactly 9 o'clock as "Foggy" Henson rang the doorbell of the Tysons' tower apartment. In his left hand he not only held his stick and gloves, but a large florist's box. His small, rabbit-like countenance had a bland look of satisfaction on it.

"Will you take these flowers to Miss Tyson and tell her I'm here?" Foggy handed Arlene the cardboard box as he entered the empty drawing room of the apartment.

A few moments later Mrs. Tyson bustled in.

"Such beautiful white orchids, Mr. Henson! You're [illegible]! Not that Vernon doesn't do them full justice! I've made her wear her white satin!"

And indeed Vernon, pale from the strain she had endured in the past week, with violet shadows under her eyes that had not come out of the beauty box but sprang from fatigue, was as beautiful in her white gown as a Madonna.

It was a quiet Vernon who sat beside him in his car.

Rather a joke on Nan to have brought her own cousin!

Things went even better than Foggy expected. For after presenting Vernon to the host and hostess in a passage [illegible] into Alma Fairbanks [illegible]. She looked sallow in her [illegible] gown—sallow and peevish.

"This is Miss Vernon Tyson—great pal of your pal, Terry Shannon. Where's Terry by the way? Nan got him in tow?" [illegible] Foggy.

Alma did not even deign to reply. With a [illegible] movement of her head towards Vernon, she moved on.

Vernon's heart was [illegible] Terry at the party? [illegible] with Nan? She'd never have come had she known that.

In her white satin gown and Madonna coiffure Vernon was [illegible] her full meed of attention. But her heart was sore.

Because of all the men who [illegible] her and complimented [illegible] on her beauty, [illegible] though she had [illegible] of a Madame Recamier. Terry was among the missing.

For once in her frivolous, shallow [illegible] life, she had exerted herself and Nan was no fool—to study her man. She wanted to appear to Terry Shannon just what he most admired in the opposite sex.

But even though he stayed by her, Terry remained distressingly platonic. There was no time to lose, because he had just sprung the bad news to her—quite casually—that at any moment now he might have to go to Arizona.

The clock on that big church on upper Park avenue was striking midnight as Nan sat with Terry in a secluded corner of the conservatory.

"Good heavens! It's 12 o'clock! And you haven't even attempted to try on the glass slipper!"

That would fetch him, she thought. It was a broad hint. Prince Charming and Cinderella.

Terry leaned lazily back in his chair. Was it her fancy or did he almost yawn as he remarked lackadaisically: "It must have been an uncomfortable piece of footwear."

Nan snuggled against him purring. "To me you're a regular Prince anyhow, Terry."

"Come now, Nan. Admit that heart of yours is a house of many mansions?"

"It's nothing of the sort. Not now—not when I know a real he-man like yourself."

"Your 'Foggy's' looking for you. Let's get back to the dance floor."

"'Foggy'? Faugh! That shrimp? Can't you see it's you I'm fond of?"

Before he could head her off, or rise to go, she caught his hand in both of her own. "Terry, Terry darling—don't you think you and I would make a grand go of it in Arizona? Take me with you. I'm sick of all the parties, and the falseness, and the drinking, and the rotters. Every morning when I wake up, I ask myself what the whole show's about, anyhow."

"You see, my baby had the croup"

"A night operator in a little telephone exchange outside of Providence, R. I. recently received a letter from a grateful mother thanking her for sustained efforts in trying to reach a doctor late one night.

The letter closed: "You see, my baby had the croup, and, while we were doing all we could, it was a great comfort to know you were trying to get our message delivered. It turned out all right, and we are deeply grateful to you".

It is easy to picture the scene. A young couple with their first baby, and its first attack of croup. The sharp alarming cough, the labored breathing. The hurried call to the doctor. And then a great feeling of relief, knowing help was coming. To be sure, certain forms of croup may not be dangerous, and the little things which may be done while waiting for the doctor may bring ease and comfort.

When help is needed, it is needed fast and urgently. And if such times come, nothing can take the place of your own telephone, ready for your instant use.

A True Incident

The letter quoted is in the files of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company, and there are hundreds more like it. Every day, people are facing emergencies, and are turning to the telephone as the fastest, surest way of meeting them.

For Telephone Information

You can order a telephone, or obtain information about telephone service, in any one of three ways: In person — By telephone — By mail.

If you wish to call your telephone business office from a public telephone, the call is free. Just ask the operator for "Telephone Business Office", and your nickel will be returned to you.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Thinks Her Friend Is False

Dear Miss Fairfax:

He will not talk or write to me, since my girl friend told him lies about me.

I can't even find out what she said, as neither one will tell me.

I'd like to write and find out what she has really said. But other friends tell me he'll think I'm "cheap" and running after him.

Wouldn't it be better to ignore him for a while, as he is rather conceited?

H. B.

I wonder if the conceited young man who listens to gossip and then does not give a friend a chance to deny what has been said is really worth considering. Affection is such a precious thing, and so much of it is needed in this weary old world, that it seems wasteful to throw it away on some one who welcomes tale-telling and is conceited in the bargain.

• • •

SHE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW HIS INTENTIONS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When I first met him I objected to going "steady," as at that time I was not free. He said that he loved me and wanted to make me his wife. That was three years ago, but he has not said a word about marriage since.

I don't go out with any other men; stay at home evening after evening. Now I would like to make a real home for my little son, aged 5, but I hate to ask my friend what he intends to do. He is working and has a good income. I am 25, he is ten years older, and I must confess I love him truly.

JOHANNA

When a man has devoted himself exclusively to a woman for three years, and she has not gone out with anyone else, she is certainly entitled to know his intentions. Many women have written heart-breaking letters to this column about men who have been devoted for years, and when time had robbed these women of youth and opportunity, they found themselves deserted in favor of someone younger and more attractive.

In such circumstances as you relate, and I haven't thought it well to give all of the facts in the case, I certainly think a woman is entitled to know where she stands.

• • •

NOW HE'S LOST BOTH GIRLS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I was very happy with my last girl who seemed quite devoted to me. Then one night at a dance I met a former sweetheart, and she seemed to exercise over me such witchery over me, I broke up with the second girl, and went back to the first. I didn't find she was an out and out flirt, and had four or five fellows on the string.

So I tried to make up with sweetheart No. 2, but she would have none of me, and now I find myself very lonesome, with no girl at all. Would you advise me to write to No. 2 and beg to be reinstated?

DON.

Better charge this experience up to profit and loss, my dear Don, and next time be less fickle. No. 2 did no more than any high-spirited girl would do when her boy friend left her for an earlier love.

LOVE DOESN'T PLAY FAVORITES

By Nell Brinkley

BEAUTY isn't the only one to whom Love brings gifts!

The plainer girl and man we pass by the thousands is asked to help themselves from Love's incense and roses. And that's a very wonderful thing for the happiness of the world, seeing that a good many more of us are plain rather than beautiful; and that we need and seek love just as much as do the beautiful!

The same golden apple of Happiness is offered to the plain man and girl as to the colorful beauty and the handsome "chap."

A girl hangs on the arm of a little stout man, and gives him the same adoring look that ever an Adonis gets. The mouse of a girl knows the same joy of caressing love-talk that any prince ever knew.

Inner hearts from the man who loves her.

Devotion, glamorous days, unselfish love, childish fondness—the plain power by of the world's travelers gets all of these out of Love's outlay—without the allure of personal beauty.

So don't be down-hearted and full of sorrows, "HAZEL D.," who wrote this artist a despairing letter, because you are just a "passably good-looking girl and not a dazzler!

Love doesn't play favorites. LOOK AROUND YOU!

Given In Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 492

HARRIET BRAITHWAITE looked at me with staring, wide-opened eyes as I told her that I had her husband's word for my assertion that Katherine Bickett was not the woman of the photograph Harriet had seen, and that he never had been romantically attracted to my lovely kinswoman.

I did not mistake the meaning of that strange questioning stare.

She was not questioning my good faith or her husband's veracity. She was simply having difficulty in changing the current of her thoughts. For years she had been cherishing an obsession concerning her husband.

Now, in an instant, she had to discard it, and with it, all the jealous questioning of Katherine's professional aid to Edwin. This had been so unlike Harriet, and, to do her justice, she never would have thought of it if she had not been so convinced that Katherine was the woman of Edwin's treasured photograph.

Cautiously I prodded her with a question.

"Do you realize what I have just said, Harriet?" Edwin is not in love with Katherine—and never has been."

Her eyes came alive, her whole face changed. "Oh," she said, and her voice was like that of a child who has just been given some toy, long and passionately desired. Then her fine eyes clouded with remorse.

"I could go on my knees to Katherine," she said, "I couldn't hide—everything—so I acted as if I were jealous of her professional skill. Whatever can she think of me"

"I'm sure she hasn't given the matter a thought one way or another." I said a bit mendaciously. "Katherine has a one track mind when there's an emergency demanding her skill and there have been nothing but emergencies while you were working together."

"Oh! If only you are right," she sighed. "I always have thought so much of Katherine, and it has been like a nightmare to me, this almost hatred which I have felt for her in these last hours. I wouldn't have her guess for worlds."

"She won't." I assured her stoutly, while I paid a mental tribute to the gallantry of this woman who could think first of another woman in the face of this wonderful news that had come to her.

I dreaded her next question, for when it came I knew that I must begin to tell her the story of that slander of her husband's of whose existence she had never known. But I braced myself for the ordeal, and was ready with an answer when, after a pause, she looked directly at me and asked

"If that photograph I saw is not Katherine's then whose is it? I am rejoiced, of course, that I do not have to hate Katherine, but it won't be easy to find out that Edwin loves anyone else."

"Harriet," I said severely, "it is Edwin to whom you should be on your knees—not Katherine. Why do you persist in believing that Edwin loves someone else beside yourself?"

"It is hard to disbelieve the evidence of one's own eyes," she said with dignity. "Have you forgotten that I told you of seeing Edwin almost weeping over the photograph that he keeps in his private strong box, and repeating over and over, 'Kathey, Kathey, poor little girl'?"

"I have forgotten nothing," I said, "and I agree that you had reason for suspicion—and—uneasiness. But not any more. Edwin has told me everything about that photograph, and you are utterly mistaken about it.

"Your husband is not in love with the woman of the photograph. He never has been in love with her. Furthermore, never, since he first met her has he given a romantic thought to any other woman.

"You have had all his love, all his fealty. Is told me that solemnly. Are you satisfied?"

Her face was suddenly transfigured as if she saw heaven opening before her.

"Am I satisfied?" she repeated, her voice a carol; her eyes starry. "I am more than satisfied. I am happier than I ever hoped to be again."

"I am so glad for you, dear," I said sincerely. Meanwhile I wondered how long it would be before she remembered that the identity of the photograph and the secret of her husband's interest in it had yet to be explained to her.

Ostrich Coronet

FLOWERS, feathers or jewels are used indiscriminately in the new evening headdresses. You may have a coronet of gilded ostrich curls to add a festive note to your after-dark costume, or you may wear a net snood studded with topas, amethysts, rubies or emeralds.

You may wear a "widow's peak" bandeau of crystal, well down on your forehead, giving you the air of a Greek goddess, or you may have a tortoise-shell bandeau ornamented with clusters of fresh flowers.

For your otherwise plain evening frock you may have a lei of brilliant poppies to lend an exotic note. Or you may have a topknot of poppies in your hair.

Health

"White Plague" Is on Down Grade

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

AT A RECENT meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association it was announced that the "great white plague" is definitely on the downward grade.

Although the percentage of deaths may be less, tuberculosis continues to be one of the chief causes of death among young people.

A vast amount of research must be done before this disease is adequately controlled, certainly before it is eliminated. It is a blessing, however, that no longer is tuberculosis regarded as "incurable." In many respects it is the most curable of all the chronic diseases.

It is found in those sections where hygienic conditions are lacking. It is an unpleasant truth that it thrives where there are poverty and ill health.

Frequently I am asked about the methods used in the treatment of tuberculosis. Rest comes first—it is by all odds the most important factor. In saying this, I mean the perfect rest that comes from going to bed.

BUILD RESISTANCE

Then every effort must be made to build up the resistance of the body. This demands plenty of fresh air, sunshine and nutritious food. Cleanly surroundings are necessary. Change of climate may be remarkably helpful, but it is not essential to the cure.

A similar program is effective in preventing the disease. Indeed, a routine of health will promote the health of everybody who follows it.

For many reasons, the treatment of tuberculosis is best carried on in an institution that is conducted for sufferers from this disease. Special provision is made for adequate care. Likewise, the better control lessens the danger of spreading the disease to others. This is particularly important in the virulent type of tuberculosis.

As the public becomes familiar with the disease and heeds its dangers, there will be a decided decrease in the number of cases. To be sure of happy results, tuberculosis must be recognized and properly treated in its early stages.

DANGEROUS YEARS

Unfortunately, many suffer from this disease who do not know it. They feel ill, but fail to realize just what is wrong.

Careful study of all the facts involved proves to us how important it is to guard children approaching their "teens" and young adults against this serious ailment. It is generally said of youth "Oh! they are young and strong!" But really it is at the time when such demands are made on the body that it becomes a ready victim to the germs of tuberculosis.

From the age of puberty to 20 are the dangerous years. It is dangerous for boys and girls, young men and women, to neglect taking nourishing food and obtaining sufficient hours of rest and relaxation.

Persistent cough, poor appetite, indigestion, fever and pain in the chest are symptoms that must not be disregarded. Spitting of blood or blood-streaked sputum is a danger signal which should arouse suspicion. These symptoms do not necessarily indicate tuberculosis, of course, but they demand investigation. The doctor is the one to decide what the trouble is and what to do about it.

Is It a Handicap To Be Plain?

By RUBY AYRES

BEAUTY is but skin-deep we are told, although that does not prevent the prettiest girl from getting the most attention wherever she goes, for many men in the first place are undoubtedly attracted by beauty and do not stop to discover whether there are any brains to back it up.

It is so true that one can not live forever on a view; and so the wise woman will cultivate other interests to attract the wandering male fancy when it wearies of perfect contour, cupid-bow lips and starry eyes, and therefore I do not believe that it is at all a handicap to be plain.

Every plain woman has her pretty moments and when they come they are often far more attractive than the fine women as eternally and rather monotonously beautiful.

A changing face always delight and it generally belongs to what is called by the unenlightened a "plain woman." It is said that the camera cannot lie, but I have had on more than one occasion, undoubted proof that it can.

A man of whom I have been told was asked to meet a girl whose portrait he had seen and had not admired. He thought she had an expression free, and felt faintly amused when someone said "Oh, you'll like her, she's so attractive."

And when at last they met, he found this to be true.

"I once saw a dreadful photograph of you," he told her. "It was a most libelous thing, and not in the least like you." As a matter of fact it was exactly like her when her face was in repose for she was one of those people who depend entirely on vivacity and expression, and we all know how expert photographers are at wiping all signs of intelligence from the face.

So much depends on character and expression; these two things are often a far greater asset than mere beauty of feature and coloring.

Even the plainest woman is beautiful if she has personality, and the most beautiful woman can, after a time, become uninteresting to look at if she has no personality.

Glamorous Belts

YOU MAY clasp a wide gold mesh belt with a jewelled buckle about the waist of your black dinner gown, and achieve a new brilliance. Or you may prefer a belt of colored sequins, and a matching sequins capelet.

You may have a metallic belt, six inches wide and studded with swirl-colored gems, to a dress up your velvet evening gowns. Or you may tie a sash of gold ribbon around your last year's frock.

There's no end to the festivity you may achieve by means of a few well-chosen and completely frivolous evening accessories this year. Try it, and witness a transformation.

Cookies For The School Luncheon

Rich in Vital Minerals

By MARTHA LEE

SCHOOL days are cookie days. Cookies never taste better than at that afternoon hour when school is over and play time has come. A simple cookie and a glass of milk make a satisfying snack—satisfying to the mother as well as to the youngster.

Cookies fit nicely into the school luncheon, too. Or into the evening meal as an accompaniment to baked apples or a dish of fruit. It is really remarkable how many people like such simple, wholesome desserts if given an opportunity to have them.

Cookies that contain eggs are especially good for children these days when they must be indoors during the sunniest hours of the day. For eggs, especially egg yolk, literally brings sunshine into a child's diet.

SWEDISH GOLD COOKIES are particularly good. They contain only egg yolk, butter, sugar and flour. The egg yolks are hard cooked—one of the best forms in which to serve them to children. Incidentally, these cookies are a grand way to use up the egg yolks left over from angel food cake or French meringue.

7 or 8 yolks, hard cooked
1 cup shortening, half butter
½ tsp. salt
1¾ to 2 cups flour
¾ cup sugar
½ tsp. lemon extract

Rub the hard cooked yolks through a sieve. Cream the sugar, shortening and salt. Add flavoring and the sieved yolks, stirring thoroughly. Add the flour to make a moderately thick but not stiff dough. Form into rolls or pack into wax paper-lined loaf pan. Put into refrigerator to chill. When ready to bake, unmold, slice thin. Brush with egg yolk which has been mixed with a teaspoon of cold water. Sprinkle lightly with sugar or cinnamon-sugar and bake 10 minutes in quick oven (425 deg. F.) Instead of molding and chilling the dough may be put through a cookie press and baked at once.

Crisp they are, and crunchy and good with a glass of milk or a cup of tea.

Graham crackers with CREAM ICING spread between them sandwich delights. Mix well. Add necessary cookies. A supply of the icing may be made up and kept in a tightly covered jar in the refrigerator for a few days. This quantity makes 18 "sandwiches." It is best to make them just before serving, for the high sugar content of the icing makes the crackers become crumbly if kept more than a half day.

4 tablespoons butter
1 egg yolk
2 cups confectioners' sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cream butter, add egg yolk and beat thoroughly. Add gradually the sugar and the flavoring. The amount of icing makes about 19 graham cracker "sandwiches" if a rounding tablespoon of icing is allowed for each sandwich.

OATMEAL COOKIES

½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
2-3 cup sour milk
2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ tsp. ground cloves
¼ tsp. ground nutmeg
1 tsp. vanilla
2 cups oatmeal
1 cup raisins

Blend shortening and sugar. Add egg and beat thoroughly. Mix and sift flour, baking powder, soda, salt, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg. Add these dry ingredients alternately with the sour milk to the first mixture. Add oatmeal. Mix well. Add raisins and vanilla. Mix thoroughly. Drop from a spoon onto a well greased baking sheet and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 deg. F.) for 10 minutes or until nicely browned.

BRAN COOKIES

½ cup shortening
1 cup light brown sugar
2 eggs
1 tbsp. milk
1½ cups flour
2 tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
2 cups bran
1 tsp. vanilla

Blend shortening and sugar. Add eggs and beat well. Mix the flour, baking powder, salt and bran. Add vanilla to the milk. Add the liquid and dry ingredients alternately to the first mixture. Mix thoroughly. Drop from a teaspoon onto greased baking sheets. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 deg. F.) from 8 to 10 minutes. Three-quarters cup chopped raisins, chopped dates or chopped nuts may be added.

Prisoner of the OGPU

By GEORGE KITCHEN

CHAPTER 44

Two days later the agriculturist died. We had been fond of this jovial, kindly man and mourned his loss.

"Who will come next?" we thought.

Our next assignment was to cut timber. Shapovalov remained faithful to the brief he had expressed on the first day, namely, that it would do the "intelligentsia" good to work a little with an axe instead of a pen.

He divided our group and added two of our number to each detachment going into the forest.

"We'll see how you work," was his jeering farewell to us.

Only Professor Yanushevsky escaped our fate, as he had been urgently ordered to proceed to Ust-Sysolsk where his services were required.

It was my good luck to be attached to a group of peasants, who were used to hard work of this kind. By 7 p. m. we finished our assignment.

The first day I had worked 16 hours; the second brought only 13. I had done the same kind of work at Kotlas and it came easier.

The next day, our commander decided that we worked very well and sent a group composed of the "intelligentsia" alone to a remote section of the forest.

We went there with our saws and axes and were followed by the colorful Turcomans whose assignment was located next to ours. This time things did not go so well.

The foreman gave a false report to Shapovalov, who in turn was pleased to forward it on to the administration by telephone.

In a New Cap

At that time our clever army flier Simanko succeeded in a little trick, thanks to which our whole group of "intelligentsia" was assigned to the easy task of preparing firewood for the work post.

For no a reason Simanko was once urgently called out of the barracks by Shapovalov. By mistake he had on the uniform cap of engineer Chernayev when he ran out.

As he reported to the commander, he noticed that the latter was covetously looking at the uniform emblem on the cap.

Simanko immediately suggested that the commander try on the cap and made some flattering remarks to the effect that it was particularly becoming.

The commander was as pleased as a child with a toy, stepped up to the mirror, sighed, took the cap off and put it on again.

Impressed by this interest, Simanko immediately made him a present of the cap.

The sacrifice was fully rewarded Simanko was invited to have supper with the commander and returned to the barracks drunk as a lord.

At roll-call we saw our commander wearing his new cap. He was as proud of it as a little boy and ordered with a broad grin:

"Detachment of Intelligentsia, to the cutting of fire-wood!"

Having arrived at their destination in the forest, the cutters of firewood immediately built a large fire and relaxed around it, telling stories and making merry.

However, Simanko's star was not destined to shine for long and he was replaced in the affections of the boss by a new favorite, the artist Ertel, who made a good portrait of the commander in his new cap.

The detachment of "intelligentsia" was disbanded and again we were all tied one job or another as luck determined. Some of us went back to the forest, some to the kitchen, some to other tasks.

Ertel used his popularity with the boss to advantage and procured us a supply of spoilt herring which the store had not been allowed to sell.

The storekeeper called these herring "anchovy-flavored," but as a matter of fact they were so far gone that one could not look at them without holding one's nose.

But "hunger will break stone walls."

Too Hungry

We accepted the Pole's advice, washed the herring thoroughly and placed them outside in the cold. We then chopped off pieces of this frozen fish and ate it with our bread. It was quite a delectable dish.

After we had been at the work post ten days, a commission from the central office of the administration suddenly arrived; this brought about a change in our fate.

The regulations of the penal camp code expressly provided that all prisoners sentenced on counter-revolutionary charges were to spend their first six months at the penal camps in special disciplinary squads doing hard labor.

However, the need for trained workers was so great that it was decided to make an exception and to use the "intelligentsia" prisoners at the work for which they were best fitted.

In this manner the evil plan of Zakhvatkin's to have me sent to the Sixth Work Post, in the hope that I would there get my full share of brutality and physical labor, was thwarted.

Together with my other companions I was projected right into the very center of the penal camps, the offices of the administration at Ust-Sysolsk.

It all came about quite accidentally, without my trying for it in any way. Just as at Kotlas, my guardian angel took charge of my fate at the critical moment.

This time my guardian angel attained his ends through the medium of the assistant to the chairman of the commission, prisoner Petkin from Moscow.

Have Narrow Escape in South End Fire

This bed-ridden mother, Mrs. Marion E. Whidden of Rose street, South End, had to be carried to safety by a neighbor when fire swept her home today. Also rescued was her three-year-old son, Francis, who was almost suffocated in the smoke-filled kitchen.

ILL WOMAN SAVED

South End Fire Perils Mother, Son

An hour before her scheduled departure for a hospital to undergo an operation Mrs. Marion E. Whidden was carried from her burning Rose street, South End, apartment today.

Her three-year-old son, Francis, was found almost suffocated in the smoke-filled kitchen 15 minutes later.

Joseph Mulligan, Mrs. Whidden's brother-in-law and next-door neighbor, saw smoke pouring from the woman's home. He rushed in, lifted her from a bed and plunged through the flames to the door.

Rushing back to the apartment after leaving Mrs. Whidden in his own home, Mulligan could find no trace of little Francis. Dense smoke blinded him.

Reaching the scene, firmen of Ladder No. 3 searched the rooms for several minutes before they found the child lying on the kitchen floor.

Having carried the boy to safety, firemen then discovered Mulligan had disappeared. They found him after several minutes in the flame-seared cellar. He had not learned of his nephew's rescue and near collapse.

Mild and yet they Satisfy —how do you do that?

Well, to start with, we take tobacco from our own Southland—mild ripe tobacco with lots of natural flavor but no harshness or bitterness.

THEN AS A SECOND STEP—
We blend this home-grown tobacco with spicy, aromatic Turkish tobaccos from across the seas. These Turkish tobaccos, you may know, have a flavor and fragrance entirely different from our own.

AS A THIRD STEP—
These tobaccos are cross-blended—welded together—the best way we've found to get a more pleasing flavor and a better taste in a cigarette.

THAT'S WHY CHESTERFIELDS ARE MILD AND YET THEY SATISFY

In a single day people from ten different states visited our Chesterfield factories.

8,200 visitors during the past year saw Chesterfields made.

25 P. C. POWER CUT URGED

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Had the traditional stranger from Mars been visiting at Williamstown on Tuesday he might have commented on the great display of patriotism evidenced by the undergraduate body. The students were gathered in gala array, most of them carrying American flags. The fraternity houses were decorated with bunting. The administrative building, Griffin Hall, was also decorated. It all looked fine. Here obviously was a great outpouring of patriotism on the part of the student body of one of the oldest colleges of New England.

But the Man from Mars would—as usual—have been wrong. The reasons underlying the flag waving were not patriotic. Far from it. The whole thing was a deliberate spoof or burlesque on the Teacher's Oath bill and the flag salute requirements in our public schools.

The Williams College faculty took the oath en masse before a notary. As they entered the administrative building they were greeted by groups of undergraduates in high feather. Some paraded in military fashion, clicked heels and did the goose step in German style. Others gave the Nazi salute. Others unfolded a large Swastika flag, thus exhibiting their opinion that an expression of loyalty to the American Constitution is on exactly the same level as German obedience to the Nazi dictatorship.

Legion Band Invited But Failed to Accept

The boys would have liked to have a band, and indeed invited the Legion Band to play for them. The band refused.

I used to know Williams College pretty well. I taught there for a time as a young instructor, still in my salad days. It is a beautiful place in spring and fall. Winter is a bit too bracing for my taste. And compulsory chapel before eight o'clock classes on a winter morning was tough going. That has been abolished, this year, after a generation's petitioning and protesting.

The faculty was small and congenial. Fraternity Row was splendid and luxurious. Professors' Row was humble, inexpensive and unobtrusive. The student body—I am speaking of twenty-five years ago—was mostly of old American stock, partly the local boys of western Massachusetts who led simple, hard working lives, and partly boys of the wealthier classes of New York city and state.

Few Intelligentsia Attended Williams

It was not a particularly intellectual college. The social life was wholesome and genial.

There always was, apparently, a Williams tradition of extreme student individualism, smartalickness, and sporadic disorder. In the earliest years of President Harry Garfield he displeased the students sufficiently to set them gathering decayed horse-drawn vehicles, which they displayed on his lawn, decorated with chains of bedroom crockery.

Later the student body under the leadership of one who is now one of the most distinguished of Boston newspaper editors decided that no faculty was going to reform the college curriculum against their will and kicked up a pretty fuss until they were placated.

Other times, other manners. As the twig is bent the tree's inclined. Apparently the Williams undergraduate body has been easy meat for the forces of propaganda. The Communist-pacifist-liberal moulders of minority opinion have been active there, as elsewhere, and obviously have found the boys unusually malleable material.

Professors Propose Use of Switch

To salute the flag is a joke beneath the dignity of the intellectual sophisticate group. To take an oath to support the Constitution, even for a group of men who are, essentially, public servants, is an obscene act to be burlesqued and parodied by the young gentlemen who are going to be part of our American electorate.

Americanism is to be considered no better than Nazism and no different. In a college founded by the Revolutionary soldier Ephraim Williams any ceremony expressive of patriotism is a huge and bad joke.

It is a slow process growing up to the stature of men. Maturity comes hard. Responsibility is not easily learned. Fads and fashions and lines and ideologies come easy. In the old days even the college young gentlemen were not immune to the corrective switch. These Williams boys would seem to be about the right mental age for a revival of the old custom.

"We Just Ran and Ran!"

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Ten-year-old Mary Waldron of Calumet street, Roxbury, tells her brother, Tommy, how she and two other girls escaped men who attempted to get them into an automobile in what police believe to have been a kidnap plot. "When they stopped the car," Mary is saying, "we were scared—and we just ran and ran!"

Curley for 'Sliding Scale' HITS RATE FIXING

Governor Curley today expressed to belief that a 25 per cahnt cut in power rates can be put into effect by the electric companies of the state.

Speaking before the special commission created by the Legislature to study the Governor's suggestion for the inauguration of a sliding scale system for public utility rates, the chief executive claimed that the companies are "now amenable to reason" and "will co-operate with state authorities in cutting their rates."

He pointed out that the electric companies last April reduced rates at his request which has saved the people approximately $2,000,000

These cuts, he stated, "by no means represents the possibility of further lowering costs to the consumers"

The Governor criticised the state public utility commission for the manner in which that body has supervised the fixing of rates.

"Their procedure has been such that the impression has gone ahroad they are interested only in the finances of the companies, having no regard for the consumers," he said.

He charged that the utilities companies have spent large sums to influence the Legislature in the past.

Adoption of the sliding scale system, he added, will be a "potent instrument" in the bringing about of further rate reductions.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

ANN MARSTERS

People are always telling us stories about Waldo Pierce, who is very highly thought of as a painter, and the subject of much amusing talk as a person. For Waldo is quite a character with his long, flowing beard and robust energy.

Anyway, he is in town (from Bangor) and he told this one himself.

He started out for Europe with a friend of his, not long ago, but just as the ship began its sail out of Boston harbor, Waldo had a spasm of homesickness.

He jumped overboard and swam ashore—all out telling anyone about it.

Then began the search for Waldo Pierce. Finally, there seemed nothing else to do but accuse his friend of drowning him, so the innocent man was taken into custody and as soon as they landed in England, he was thrust into jail.

Can't Charge Murder When Body Talks

Meanwhile, Mr. Pierce, with a change of heart, was following on the next boat, and eventually it was proven beyond a doubt that you can't hold a man for murder when the body walks and talks.

A Cambridge woman is still wondering who telephoned her one day last week when her 9-year-old daughter answered the telephone.

She had called in the janitor because she couldn't turn off the bathroom light which was directly over the tub. She had placed a high kitchen stool in the tub for him to stand on, and she volunteered to hold it while he mounted to the light

When the telephone rang, her daughter answered, and her mother heard her say:

"Mother can't come now—she's holding the janitor in the bathtub."

Whoever it was hasn't called back since.

Waiter Checks Checks That Bound Back

Once a week one of the waiters from the Locke Ober Cafe in Winter place dons his Sunday best and goes sailing at various Harvard dormitories. His mission is ousiness—in a friendly way.

The cafe is most popular with many young men of Harvard, and these same young men are a bit careless about checking up on their bank balances. Locke's always accepts their checks—and oft-times they bounce back. So the weekly call is just to straighten out the situation.

I hear that Pauline's debut will be probably the most elaborate affair of the season.

Governor Curley to Get New Kind of Dollar

HEARD ABOUT TOWN—Maurice Tobin, who rolled up 80,000 votes for school committeeman, will be a candidate for mayor of Boston—and he's hopeful of Governor Curley's support . . . John Roosevelt has a new Plymouth car on order. He completely wrecked the last one, you remember, and he says the insurance money is buying the new one . . . Ole Olson, of Olson and Johnson, has been chasing the Governor around to present him with a new kind of silver dollar. It's a crocheted one made by his grandmother . . . There's a report that Jeritza plans to give up her operatic career. She has cancelled her engagement at the Chicago Opera House . . . Roland Hayes used to be an elevator boy in Boston . . . Mrs. James Bryant Conant, wife of Harvard's president, is seen bicycling around Fresh Pond parkway of a morning . . . Sally Rand may become a lecturer on the body beautiful. Without a fan?

Radcliffe Girl Insists on Oath

"Marlboro schools are free from Communism and they will remain that way."

That statement came today from Miss Edna Granitsas, 21-year-old Radcliffe student, newly elected to the school committee of Marlboro.

"That is if I have anything to do with it, they will," the only woman school committeeman declared.

"And in my position as a member of the school board I will have a great deal to do with it.

"Another one of my intentions is to stand squarely behind the teachers' oath bill.

"I am a 100 per cent American. And being a 100 per cent American, I am for every teacher taking the oath in support of our Constitution."

Miss Granitsas was less definite about her other plans. She had merely given thought to her two most important intentions.

"I will give my personal attention to problems of the parents, however," she said.

"And will welcome their bringing them to me."

Miss Granitsas is the first woman ever to hold a public office in her city.

Tuckerman Out For Council

Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., nationally known sportsman and member of the state Republican committee, today at Beverly announced his candidacy for the Governor's Council from the Fifth district, one of the largest in Massachusetts.

Tuckerman, president of the Eastern Racing Association, which operates Suffolk Downs track in Boston, said the position of councillor demands a "young man who cannot be bow-beaten or lulled into inaction by promises or favors."

He described the post as a fighting, working job and no longer a peaceful, honorary position.

Mrs. Prior Held For Manslaughter

Navy Air Force Adequate by 1940

Washington, Nov. 7 (AP)—Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, said today there was a possibility that by 1940 the navy will have an air force adequate to complement a treaty strength navy.

Under present ship building plans, the navy will reach by 1942 the full sea fighting strength permitted by the Washington and London naval treaties.

Bruening, Hitler Aide, in Boston

Dr Heinrich Bruening former chancellor of Germany, spent a few days in Boston during a three weeks' secret visit to this country it was learned

Dr Bruening is now on the high seas en route to Europe

While in Boston, the former chancellor is understood to have conferred with several prominent persons, including Dr Oliver M W. Sprague, Harvard economist and former member of the Roosevelt brain trust

Despite the fact that his visit was kept secret, Dr Bruening made his home in a Boston hotel during the few days he stayed

Dr. Sprague could not be reached

At his home it was said that Dr Bruening dined with Dr Sprague on one evening during his stay here

Dr Bruening intends to return to Boston late in January, when he is scheduled to give a course of lectures in connection with the 96th annual lecture season of the Lowell Institute.

Jewish Fund in Final Rallies

One more workers' luncheon rally is scheduled as the Associated Jewish Philanthropies charity drive nears its close

A general round-up will feature the luncheon which will be held Friday at the Federal street headquarters.

Members of the Rodeo now appearing at the Boston Garden will be the guests of honor at the meeting.

Sidney Rabinovitz, general chairman of the drive, reported that the total raised to date has reached $429,867, or more than $25,000 in excess of last year's campaign.

Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams, spiritual leader of Temple Ohabei Shalom, guest speaker at the Brotherhood rally held yesterday, congratulated the workers on their splendid efforts in conducting the drive.

COLLECTIONS

Point to FURTHER N. E. Gains

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

While there are many sensitive barometers for measuring the condition of business, we will accept reports on collections as final in drawing conclusions regarding the soundness of recovery trends.

It is for this reason we find a great deal of cheer in the current Dun & Bradstreet report on the Boston trade area. Collections by department stores in all sections of New England are said to have shown steady improvement over the last four years. That covers the more populous sections. Wholesale collections, hotel . . slow, are rated fair to good. That means the smaller communities find the going easier. A good sign, for recovery in New England could not get very far if limited to the cities.

That was a sparkling interview Marriner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, gave the New York American. While he admitted the possibility of unwise use of bank credit to bid up prices of equities and real estate, he thought the board could deal with such hazards without major monetary maneuvers. And he quite definitely denied the United States contains the elements of inflation. His contention is that a creditor country, free of the wealth destruction which comes through war, lacks even the makings of inflation.

Speaking of market action, Johns Manville has literally jumped from 44 to 92, with only one real reaction ..and that from 77 to 71 ..All this since last June . . . Air Reduction has completed its second 80-point move since March...Without time out for even a 5-point dip while the moves were on...March to May saw it scoot from 105 to 135 . . October to present from 144 to 171 . . . And Texas Corporation sold at 23 last May . . . It is still there . . . Westinghouse lacking friends in the boardrooms last March at 33 . . . Darling of the crowd now at 91 . . . Less than nine months later and 175 per cent higher.

The industrials drove into new high ground . . . steels had a smash . . . to fresh peaks and rail . . . ned in good demand . . . the conditions on . . . we mentioned renewal of . . . buil . . . were . . . The rail stocks could not forge over their barrier, even though better action was recorded. Until this last happens one cannot be too certain. For the industrials at new highs are still within an acknowledged resistance area of formidable proportions.

* * *

Shorts: The market needs the rails . . . Unless they come forward to relieve the strain on the industrials fighting to get ahead in a resistance area, long stock will be a hazard . . . If and when they do, rail equipments, utilities and specialties look attractive . . . But not until then . . . And the point to be driven home right now is that while industrial stock averages are slightly above the previous high, at which we liquidated our hypothetical holdings, they have not progressed enough to cause any regret.

STOCKS Close FIRM

TRADING LESS ACTIVE

New York, Nov. 7—Gains of fractions to around 2 points were achieved today in another lively but selective session.

Trading opened with a rush which pushed transactions in the first hour to better than 800,000 shares, and the ticker lagged by about three minutes at one time.

Later, however, quietness spread through the list, and there were signs of profit-taking and scattered short selling.

General Motors was up fractionally and Chrysler better than a point. Two points and more were gained by Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Spiegel-My-Stern. Western Union was up 4 and fractions to around a point were held by American Telephone, Public Service of New Jersey, American Water Works and Consolidated Gas.

Important rail shares were unchanged to slightly higher. Firm spots included Container Corp., American Radiator and Johns-Manville.

Coca-Cola snapped up 11 points on a few sales. Many issues got into new high territory for several years. The late tone was fairly firm.

Current Factors

Firmness of Western Union was attributed to a revival of rumors that a dividend was being considered by the company.

The flurry in Loew's followed the action of the company's directors in declaring an extra dividend of 50 cents in addition to the regular quarterly payment of a like amount.

At the same time, in view of the improvement in moving picture box office receipts, the extra disbursement was more or less expected.

The liveliness of some of the merchandising stocks was coincident with a disclosure of a sharp increase in Montgomery Ward sales for October. The concern's business for the month aggregated $35,897,447 against $29,703,511 in the same 1934 period and was the largest for any month in its history.

Woolworth's October sales were up .3 of 1 per cent from last year.

Arguments over Tuesday's elections, and their effect on the markets, were still being heard in the board rooms but the political factor tended to fade as a price stimulant. The market was interested, although not moved, by European developments.

Bar Silver

London, Nov. 7 (AP)—Bar silver steady, unchanged at 29 5-16d. (U. S. equivalent 64.93 cents.)

Bar Gold

London, Nov 7 (AP)—Bar gold advanced 1 penny to 141s 5½d. (U. S. equivalent $34.78.)

BIG CONCERNS

Plan to GIVE STEADIER Work

By B. C. Forbes

What a wage earner wants most of all is steady employment. General Motors has just set aside $60,000,000 for this objective.

Workers, of course, desire other things: good wages, reasonable work hours, satisfactory working conditions, including well-ventilated plants, adequate safety appliances, foremen and other overseers interested in their well-being.

But nothing can take the place of regular employment. Confidence that a weekly pay envelope will be forthcoming all through the year gives a breadwinner a sense of security, a sense of ability to take care of wife and family.

An increasing number of employers have striven during the last decade to provide continuous work. Some have guaranteed their work people 45 or more weeks steady employment every year. But, unhappily, not enough concerns have thus far devised ways and means to keep employment on a steady keel all through the year.

* * *

It is because of this, and because of the lamentable amount of idleness precipitated by periodic panics, that the federal government has enacted the Social Security Law, with its provisions for unemployment payments.

There is, however, grave questioning concerning the feasibility of this far-reaching measure. It includes, for example, creation of a thirty-five billion to fifty billion dollar reserve fund for old-age pensions, unemployment payments, etc., but nobody knows how any such colossal sum can be kept in anything like liquid form, ready for use when most needed?

Workers who think would unquestionably rather feel sure of being provided steady employment than being dependent upon a dole for a limited number of weeks from political officeholders.

The social security act aims at co-operation with the states in making possible modest payments only for periods ranging from a few months to less than one year.

* * *

The automobile industry, perhaps the most resourcefully, ingeniously, aggressively managed in America, is putting forth admirable efforts to iron out its peaks and valleys of employment.

Holding the New York automobile show at the beginning of November instead of after the New Year was inspired solely by desire to keep more men at work during what heretofore has been the slackest season of the year.

Thus far, indications are that the experiment will prove successful. Indeed, authoritative assurances are that the automobile industry has enough business on hand to keep it going for several months.

Four Debutantes Presented In Somerset Ballroom

By BETTY ALDEN

SLOWLY the clock strikes nine . . . The ballroom of the Somerset is forsaken . . . Long since aunts and mothers of the debs have made their last hurried preparations, have given last minute instructions to the servants and departed to dress for one of the many dinner parties . . .

Now, one of the hotel attendants is industriously roping off part of the foyer . . . Another one is setting out a sign which reads: "The Misses Mary Dwight Clark, Anne Homans, Dorothea Merriman, Anne Richards, Debutante Ball, Louis XIV Ballroom" . . . and still another is carefully arranging a row of golden and rose chairs around the wall of the ballroom . . . He arranges the last one, steps back to appraise his handiwork and disappears on some other mission, while the chairs continue to wait in orderly rows for the debs and their escorts to arrive . . .

MARJORIE SALTONSTALL

And as the chairs continue to wait and the clock ticks on toward ten, an air of quiet expectancy gradually pervades the empty ballroom but is suddenly shattered by the chatter and laughter of the first dinner party group to come crowding in through the small carriage entrance . . .

Before long the entrance and foyer are completely jammed with guests waiting to take off their wraps and Chesterfields and go in to greet their hostesses . . .

Richly embroidered tapestries and a profusion of golden and bronze chrysanthemums formed a colorful background for the simple white and silver frocks worn by the debutantes . . . Slowly the guests offered their greetings to the girls and then glided off to dance or else to chat in the little formal garden erected at the other end of the ballroom . . .

Mrs. George S. Pettee in Lace Gown

MRS. RICHARD LAWRENCE wearing a green taffeta dress under her long mink wrap was one of the first to arrive . . . Others were: Mrs. John Washburn Coolidge whose gown was of soft brown satin, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Pettee, the latter wearing a small lace mantilla with her lace gown, Leslie Eustis on the arm of Bradford Millett, Polly Olney and Anne Soule, two sister debs, resplendent in long velvet wraps with ermine collars, and Amy Lang whose light blue frock accentuated the blondeness of her hair . . .

Celina Robbins wore a heavy brocaded satin gown of shell pink as she strolled through the foyer with Bill Little . . . Dorothy West, Mary Trumbull, Polly Lovering, Marjorie Saltonstall in raspberry moire picture frock, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Hill Jr., Elise Sortwell, all passed through the receiving line . . .

Barbara Brewer, very cunning in flame lace with a small ostrich cape, was squired by Henry Lyman . . .

Caroline Hunnewell of Wellesley wore a filmy frock of black net over taffeta . . . the net was embroidered with huge silver dots . . .

Mrs. John Chapin in sapphire velvet, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardiner Coolidge 3d, Mr. and Mrs. Howland Shaw Warren, Anne Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur L. Devens, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Winthrop, Mrs. Nelson Bartlett, Anne Clark in crimson gown under a very luxurious mink coat, Elinor Fay, Mark Byron, Anne Hutchins, Geraldine Field, Francis Lowell and Dorothy Dow were also among the many guests . . .

Mrs. John W. Myers Entertains

MRS. JOHN W. MYERS, chairman of the Boston Morning Musicales committee, gave her autumn luncheon for the members of the committee yesterday at her Westwood home . . .

She received her guests gowned in a simple printed gown of navy blue and red and after serving them a delicious luncheon, settled back to listen to the reports they had to make on the progress of the plans for the eighth season of the Musicales which opens on November 20 . . .

With desert there were impromptu speeches by various members, including Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, whose wit and cunning in calling upon unsuspecting members to speak, was one of the delights of the party . . . Practically everyone had to take a bow, much to the amusement, and dismay, of the hostess who had fears that no one would respond to her next invitations to luncheon if they thought impromptu speechifying would be on the program . . . Her fears along that line are ungrounded for only a catastrophe would prevent any of the Musicales ladies from missing Mrs. Myers' parties . . .

Enjoying her hospitality yesterday were Mrs. A. Barr Comstock, Mrs. John D. Adams, Mrs. Francis G. Barnum, Mrs. Winthrop Jameson, Mrs. T. Barnet Plimpton, Mrs. Charles E. Gilbert, Mrs. Harold McNeil, Mrs. Hatherly Foster, Jr., Mrs. Stedman Buttrick, Jr., Mrs. George W. Knowlton, Jr., Mrs. Frank C. Nichols, Mrs. Frank A. Pemberton, Mrs. Henry M. Shreve, Mrs. Samuel S. Stevens, Mrs. Herbert L. Tinkham, Mrs. Edgar N. Wrightington, Mrs. Horace Fraser, Mrs. John A. Greene, Mrs. Francis Capper, Mrs. Harry T. Hayward, Mrs. H. Addington Bruce, and about 50 others . . .

SOCIETY DONS ITS FINEST TO GREET NEW DEBUTANTES

MISS LESLIE EUSTIS daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard S. Eustis of Chestnut Hill, was escorted by Bradford Millett at the dance at the Somerset last night which welcomed four debutantes into society's ranks.

MISS ANNE CLARK snapped as she arrived at the Hotel Somerset last night to attend the dance which marked the debut of the Misses Mary Dwight Clark, Anne Homans, Dorothea Merriman and Anne Richards. Miss Clark is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Haven Clark.

Debutante Feted at Luncheon

DESPITE the summer-like weather, the deep, rich colors of autumn predominated in the flowers and costumes at the buffet luncheon which Mrs. Andrew Adie gave in honor of her debutante niece, Miss Margaret Wright, this afternoon.

Warm copper and bronze chrysanthemums decorated the rooms of Woodlands, Mrs. Adie's home in Chestnut Hill, and formed a harmonious background for the debutante and her aunt as they received their guests.

Miss Wright wore a reddish brown dress made with a panel of soft grey blue. Her hat was an off-the-face model of the same shade of brown, trimmed with the blue. She wore a corsage of red bronze orchids. Mrs. Adie's dress was of black and gold

A large group of debs and post debs attended the luncheon. Among the post debs were Ardelle Moseley, Peggy Hardwick, Mary Hastings, Dorothy McKee, Nancy Holdsworth and Olivia Osborne

Sister debutantes of Miss Wright who attended the luncheon were Virginia Phelan, Aloe Plimpton, Patricia Preston, Leslie Eustis, Polly Long, Dorothy Dow, Reinette Plimpton, Phyllis Motley, Miriam Little, Joan Chapin, Nancy Byron, Betty Prescott and Constance Matless.

Miss Wright, who is the daughter of Mr and Mrs. Duncan Wright of Chestnut street, has graduated from Miss May's school last June and is now studying at Miss Sacker's School of Design

ANOTHER FAIR MEMBER of the debutante set who attended the dance at the Somerset last night was Miss Polly Olney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. T. Olney of Brookline.

Bridge

Mrs. Horace H. Soule heads the committee which is making the arrangements for the annual sale to benefit St. Monica's Home for the Aged, which will be held on Wednesday, November 20 at the Hotel Vendome.

Both useful and novel things will be on sale and there will be a luncheon followed by bridge. Already Mrs. Robert S. Minot, Mrs. Gilbert Horrax, Miss Hilda Williams, Mrs. Herbert H. White, Mrs. John Hurd, Mrs. John Lowell, Mrs. Edwin S. Webster, Miss Margaret Jones and Miss Elizabeth Train have reserved tables.

Mrs. Rust Entertains

Mrs. Paul D. Rust, Jr., gave a tea at the Ritz-Carlton this afternoon in honor of the feminine members of the group of experts from the Federal Housing Administration in Washington who are now conducting an "Insured Mortgage Clinic" in Boston

The honor guests, Miss Helen McGrath, and Miss Mary Pepper of Washington, and Miss Marie Driscoll of Boston, addressed the gathering and discussed the various phases of the National Housing Act.

AUSTEN LAKE

B. A. A.'s Last Rites: Club Fittings Go Under Hammer

Austen Lake

NOVEMBER'S BLEAK LIGHTS filtered through the B. A. A.'s mahogany gloom. Inside the brown-stone clubhouse on Exeter street, a brass-voiced auctioneer barked the values of its ancient fittings, a requiem to defunct tradition intoned by a strident parson of dissolution.

Swarms of squat scavengers, dealers with soiled collars and gimlet eyes, poked and prodded the furnishings—the crows who pick up carrion failure, profiteers who fatten on calamity.

"How much fo' this here boofay, Ten Dollahs?" droned the voice.

A distant victrola wailed thinly through the halls—Caruso whining a forgotten song on a fading scene. ('Leven Dollahs . . .). The billiard tables shrouded beneath the glazed stares of stuffed beasts on the walls. A painting of an old Henley regatta with ladies in a gay drizzle of garden colors, whiskery male peacocks and a carnival air. A grandfather's clock with its lazy tick stopped, its pendulum stilled. Leather cozy-chairs with the imprint of vanished elders. ("'Leven fi'ty an' a steal . . .")

So passes the last cloistered spot where a man may keep his hat on indoors and sip, sulk, frisk or loaf, according to his mood.

In the reading room, above the trays of well-thumbed tomes, a sign asks "Silence for the sake of the Readers." But the readers are gone, leaving only the hoarse exhalations of the bidding dealers.

A sideboard, where the traditional punchbowl rested on Anniversary Nights, wears a yellow ticket on its polished leg.

* * *

Drowned by Comfort

FOR NEARLY FIFTY YEARS the blue lamp with the rampant unicorn has glowed nightly outside the B. A. A. door. Flunkies in horizon blue and gilt greeted the members at the door.

There was the genial atmosphere of an English hunting scene in the upstairs halls, the odors of roast duck, the tinkle of ice in tall glasses, the haze of good tobacco and the drowsy murmur of voices.

There was no rush, no uneasy pressure within its doors. Just leisure and good living. So that over the years the sense of social lull and the contentment in old friendships spelled the club's doom.

Boisterous youth found the cathedral calm depressing, and the elders bogged down in their grooves, wishing only to stop the clock, forget the inexorable advance of their years and the evanescence of youth.

The cob-webbed gymnasium with its brick walls, its ancient apparatus with dumbbells lining the walls, a narrow running gallery, and weight lifting machines, fell into disuse. And, except as a reception hall for the Marathon runners, when there were cots and a table under a big top cloth with nickled pails of broth and biscuits, it was seldom used.

* * *

Mourners Watch the Passing

NOW THE OLD CLUBHOUSE, with its wealth of bar-crystal and mid-Victorian furnishings, is passing piecemeal into profane hands, to be resold to boarding-house keepers about the city.

A few sentimental bits have been bid in by the elders. In the end, the accumulation of fittings which cost several hundred thousands and took years to gather, has sold at junk prices.

A handful of veterans came to sit for a last communal moment in their favorite corners and shed an inward tear. A few others stood on the outer fringe of the bidding dealers and watched with sad resentment.

They vowed doubtfully that the scattered legion would rally again and the fellowship should be preserved. But the brass-voiced auctioneer and the scavenging crows were picking the corpse clean and leaving only the skeleton of tradition.

* * *

Unmasking Masked Gal

THERE IS A LEGAL KICKUP to the July 19th day at Suffolk Downs when Masked Gal was disqualified by the race stewards by the light of the moon, and the purse money awarded to the second horse, named Argoan.

But, due to the fact that the cashiers had already paid off stub holders on Masked Gal, there was no way of catching the bettors and making them disgorge their winnings to the Argoan players. And, as it involved a matter of $41,000, the track said it could not be expected to go down into its own britches and dig up a like sum, just to keep everybody happy.

Now, in a bill of equity brought by a Mrs. Olivia Finlay, and a law suit brought by a Mr. Theodore Bears, both Argoan backers, claim is being made to first-place money.

Naturally, if these individuals will get judgment, all of Argoan's backers, who can show evidence of their wagers, can collect. Yet there is scant chance of this because the state race law stipulates that all pay-off decisions rest officially with the track stewards.

U. C. L. A's Missing Fullback

PRIZE FOOTBALL MYSTERY of the year—The missing fullback of the U. of California (Los Angeles) who disappeared after being accused of being an impostor. Registering as Ted Kay, he is supposed to be the real Ted's brother, Clois, a former Texas Mines athlete. Acquaintances of Clois say he can be identified by knife-scars received in an old stabbing in an El Paso beer hall. Just an apple-cheeked schoolboy Mrs. Tack Hardwick's 200-foot Diesel yacht, the Arcadia, is still afloat after being reported foundered in the last Miami hurricane. Tack is able to take nourishment again . . . Having taught his son the art of backfield blocking since early childhood, Tuss McLaughry, Brown coach, recently received a letter from the boy at Andover, saying: "Dear Dad—I thought I knew how to block, but I bounced off those Yale freshmen like a tennis ball off a brick wall . . . The answer is that Yale, in company with most other major colleges, excepting Harvard and Brown, is primed with some of the best freshman material ever collected.

Crimson Lineup Unsettled

Left Halfback, Right Guard And Both Tackle Posts Still to Be Filled

A Harvard varsity football squad of 31 players, coaches, managers and trainers will leave for Princeton early tomorrow morning for its annual encounter with the undefeated Tigers Saturday in Palmer Stadium.

Leaving Back Bay station at 8:35 a. m. on a special train which will carry the varsity soccer team as well to the scene of its scrum with the Princeton booters, the varsity is due at Princeton at 2:30 p. m.

The Crimson will take its first pre-game workout in Palmer Stadium from 3:15 to 4:15 on ground hallowed by Princeton's gridiron comeback under Fritz Crisler ground on which no Harvard grid team has trod since the great schism of a decade ago.

Immediately after the practice session the Crimson players will be whisked away to Peddie School at Heightstown, N. J., where they will dine and spend the night before the game.

TO SEE SHOW

The players will be conveyed to Palmer Stadium at noon Saturday in buses, which will rush them immediately after the game to the train which is scheduled to leave Princeton at 5:50 and reach New York at 7.

In New York the players will be the guests of New York alumni at the musical comedy "At Home Abroad," leaving for Boston on the midnight train.

Only a few players have been extended stay-over privileges, and these must return to Cambridge in a body on the 8 o'clock train Sunday night.

The practice session on Monday, Armistice Day, is scheduled at 9:30 in the morning.

The 31 players selected to make the trip are:

Ends—Captain Shann Kelly, Fred Dubiel, Robert Knapp, Keith Higgs and Gibson Winter.

Tackles—Wilton Burton, Francis Bauer, William Frost, Graham Spring, Robert Watson.

Guards — Russ Allen, Nat Blatchford, William Gaffney, George Gulian, Thomas Husband, Joseph Nee, Charles Kessler.

Centers—Francis Foley, Sam Greeley, Robert Jones.

Backs—John Adzigian, Thomas Bingham, George Blackwood, Lee Ecker, George Ford, George Hedbiom, Arthur Oakes, Mal McTernan, Fred Moseley, Vernon Struck, William Watt.

THE LINEUP

Seven positions in the starting lineup are settled, leaving the left halfback, right guard and both tackle posts still to be filled.

Brice to Quit

Orono, Me., Nov. 7—Fred M. Brice, University of Maine football coach, plans to retire at the end of the 1936-37 season. He has been here 15 years.

Maine is the first and only college at which Brice, known as "The Fox," ever coached. He came here from the Manchester, N. H., high school.

Until this year Brice's football teams were State series champions eight out of 14 years, winning 31 of 42 games.

The Maine Black Bears have been Maine champions for the past four years.

Boxing Results

New York—Abe Feldman, 127½, stopped Johnny Kriger, 130½, Jersey City, four rounds; Joe Sekyra, 130½, Dayton, O., outpointed Clarence Parrish, 132, Argentine, ten rounds.

Cincinnati—Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, N. B. A. feather champion, shaded Claude Varner, Los Angeles, 10 rounds. Decision heard.

Birmingham, Ala.—Petey Sarron, 129, Birmingham, defeated Andy Martin, 133, Boston (ex resident Watts down in second round.

Salem—Tony Aranara, 131, Lynn, drew with Somerset Jackson, 136, Lynn, six rounds.

Rutgers Team En Route For B. U. Game at Fens

You just can't convince this Wilder Tasker that his charges should give Boston University a real old-fashioned trouncing when the two clash at Fenway Park Saturday.

His squad is now enroute to Boston. Plastered all over the dressing room at New Brunswick all week have been signs such as

"Boston U. is tough."

"Don't let last year's 61-0 score fool you."

"Remember, Boston is undefeated."

In fact the Rutgers coach has spent so much time trying to convince his pupils that they may get a very rude surprise here that he has actually come to believe it true.

While Tasker is worrying Pat Hanley is doing likewise.

It is because of the miserable showing his charges have been making these past couple of days that the entire Boston University starting lineup may be shifted this afternoon.

Pat will name either Dolan or Adler for center and choose his guards from Ray Murdoch, Fred Nichols, Sol Sorrefsey, Ted Balun and Max Miller.

The starting tackles will be selected from Glenn Lutgenhorst, George McPherson, Bob Allen, Felix Dixon and Ralph Hudson, while the wingmen will be picked from Dick Van Ideratine, Frank Hughes, Frank LaCivita, Chet Smith and Harold Canavan.

In the backfield, co-Captain Warren McNamara will be at right half, and he is the only man certain to start.

Either Bucky Ford or Don Livingston will be at quarterback, and the fullback will be decided upon after Leon Spivack and Gary Famighetti prove their worth in a battle against the freshmen today.

The left halfback may be George Bader. Then again it may be Lou Blazynski or Vincent Sandercock.

Mr. Boston

Danno Mixes With Brown

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING OF news: Dan O'Mahoney will defend his title as world heavyweight wrestling champion against Orville Brown of Kansas at the Olympia in Detroit tomorrow night. Brown is popular in Detroit as a result of his bitter battles with Jim Londos.

Gus Sonnenberg, former champion, will appear in the semifinal with Ray Steele as an opponent.

Mr. Boston

"Bibber" McCoy of Cambridge will clash with Ole Olsen, Swedish wrestler from Minneapolis, in one of the preliminaries.

• • •

O'Mahoney is picked to win from Brown. If he does, he will then come to Boston to finish training for his finish tussle, best two falls out of three, with Leo Numa at the Garden on next Friday night. Numa has an even chance to tip the Irishman from his throne.

Numa intends to make his play for victory with his toe hold from behind. This is the hold that enabled him to run up such a long list of victories when he was the "Black Secret."

That was two years ago.

Numa has come a long way forward since then and will have plenty of backing when he takes his crack at O'Mahoney.

• • •

O'Mahoney has been the greatest attraction in sports this year. More than 500,000 persons have seen him in action in his bouts in the United States and Canada.

• • •

Jim Londos is still taking the sun in California. He has refused offers to meet O'Mahoney in title bouts in Chicago and New York.

• • •

Numa will train at Jerry Buckley's Gym each day at 1 p. m. Leo started to work yesterday at 4 p. m., but from now on his training time will be 1 p. m.

• • •

RING ACTION

JACK SHARKEY is working in the same gym. He is getting ready for his ten-round comeback bout against Unknown Winston at the Garden on November 22. Sharkey does not have to take off any weight as he scales only 202 pounds. His chief job is to improve his timing of punches.

The former champion has been out of the ring for two years and it is not expected that his judgment of distance will be perfect.

• • •

There has been a decided pickup in wrestling and boxing interest. This is due to Numa's title mat bout with O'Mahoney and Sharkey's comeback tussle with Winston.

The crowds at Jerry Buckley's gym and at Kelley and Hayes' gym indicate happy days are here again for the noble wrestlers and boxers.

• • •

Boxing suffered more than wrestling during the depression. Most of those persons who were formerly associated with boxing in Massachusetts turned to racing when the turf game was legalized.

• • •

Billy Ames, former boxing matchmaker at the Garden, has done a first-class job as director of publicity at Narragansett Park. In addition to being a Grade-A writer, Ames is an able promoter.

His ideas have been helpful in keeping Narragansett Park out front as the most profitable race track in New England.

• • •

Eddie Mack, the old top sergeant himself, couldn't keep the Argonne A. A. going during the depression, but has done well as director of publicity for Lou Smith at Rockingham, Agawam and Epsom Downs.

• • •

Harry Kelley, Al Lacy, Jerry Buckley, Jim MacDonald, Emergency Kelley, Bobby Goldman, Eddie Record and numerous others who have been identified with boxing found they could also master horse racing, and have been connected with various New England tracks.

• • •

RANDOM SHOTS

Joe Louis will give a boxing exhibition at the Auditorium in Providence on November 18 . . . The "Brown Bomber" will oppose Paulino in New York on December 13 . . . "Rip" Valenti will confer with Louis' management at Providence in an effort to sign the "Brown Bomber" to oppose Jack Sharkey in an outdoor show here next Summer . . . Valenti is prepared to guarantee Louis $50,000 and give him 30 per cent. of the receipts to meet Sharkey . . . A. A. U. authorities are considering action against amateur boxers who have been receiving money for bouts in Connecticut . . . In the Nutmeg State, amateurs engage in only one bout a night and are well paid for their services . . . Many of the Connecticut boxers also compete in regulation amateur shows in Rhode Island and Massachusetts.

The Redskins play the Chicago Bears on Sunday, while on the following Sunday they clash with the Cardinals . . .

HAVERHILL GOING ON HIGH

Team Beaten Only by Malden, 7 to 6, Despite 3-Weeks' Practice Delay

HAVERHILL LINEMEN ATTACK IMAGINARY FOES

Next Year, Wow!

PRACTICALLY ENTIRE TEAM RETURNS

By Will Connell

There must be a golden age ahead for the big three of the Merrimack Valley in the scholastic football title struggle.

First, Lowell started to roll this year, and Tom Keady revealed that he'd have most of his first squad back next year. Then Mark Devlin related the story of his sophomore-junior squad with only a half dozen seniors in the lot.

Now Haverhill turns up with a baker's dozen rated as first team, and 11 of these are back next year.

Jim Mansfield had hopes of a good start this fall. He called his Haverhill squad out Thursday before Labor Lay and dealt equipment.

Next day practice was suspended because of infantile paralysis danger, and the first real workout came September 23.

THREE MORE

Rindge and Quincy games were cancelled, and Malden was the opener, early in October. Despite the late start the latter won by only 7 to 6.

Lynn Classical and Waltham, still unbeaten and among the best teams of the year, were held scoreless. Then Cambridge Latin was beaten by a touchdown in a game rained out after the first half.

New Bedford Vocational invades on Saturday, then Lawrence and Manchester Central wind up the year.

The record already is very good, and with benefit of early season work might have been better. There scarcely was time to get in condition for Malden.

The '36 team should stand out, with the above forming an all veteran varsity. Another boy really ranks up with the first backfield, little Al Timpani, only 124. He's back next fall.

Subs include Buchika, Curtin and Donovan, ends; Duff and Wolf, tackles; Mavrifrides, LeConte, Zarbolias, guards; McGregor and Langlois, centers; Talerico, Costenis, Rousseau, Desando, Rowell and Araldi, backs.

Head Coach Mansfield has Charley White as chief aid. Walter Kimball, All-Scholastic guard of a few years ago, is helper with the 45 on the varsity. Woody Dinsmore, another Haverhill great of recent years, coaches the freshmen, some 65 strong.

HARVARD FIGHT WILL HOLD TIGER

GAME WILL BE NO ROUT

By Bill Grimes

Princeton has a far better collection of football players than Harvard but I question if the spirit of the Tigers can begin to compare with that of the Crimson.

From the actions of the varsity squad, you'd never suspect that a Princeton victory is a foregone conclusion.

Undoubtedly Harvard will go down to defeat, for there are few better college elevens in the country than Princeton, but you can lay it on the line that Dick Harlow's charges not only will go down fighting, but that they will not be routed.

Realizing that he has no tools to work with, Harvard is bearing with Dick Harlow who will eventually encounter enough wind to drift out of the doldrums.

There'll be a fine [illegible] out for the Boston College-Holy Cross freshman game Monday afternoon at The Heights. Dartmouth is to play Holy Cross in its third game of the 1936 season. Both teams will be composed of veteran material and it will be a miracle if either eleven is worth a plugged nickel for the remainder of the season. Just as soon as Yale was knocked off by Army and Dartmouth the experts, who had been lauding the Elis to the skies as the greatest and gamest eleven in years, reversed their opinions and are now picking "Ducky" Pond's charges to pieces.

Don't be surprised if Coach "Pat" Hanley's Terriers bump off Rutgers Saturday in Fenway Park. Moreover, if the Terriers get Rutgers on the run, they will not be content, after what happened a year ago down in Jersey, until they have driven the Scarlet squad out of the ball park.

The Terriers are aware of the fact that Rutgers is represented by a powerful team, and for the first time this season will enter a game minus the illusion that they are playing a set-up. Therefore, they should turn in their best performance of the year. A victory over Rutgers would be a fine feather in the Terriers' cap.

COUNT Shares Honors WITH PIERS

By Paul Whelton

With boondoggling and buffeting playing no slight parts, Count Casimir "Pagliacci" Polowski, the stone man, kept his undefeated record unsullied at Alex McLean's mid-week wrestling show in Boston Arena.

The bewhiskered count shared honors with Henry Piers, the Holland giant, whose fevered joust with Chief Little Moose, stocky Indian bad man, had the crowd standing on their seats.

Polowski won the feature bout of the weekly card in straight falls, with Scotty McDougall, the Canadian horseman, giving him but faint opposition, despite his rough record.

Piers, the six-foot-four-inch Hollander who has lost only two bouts since he turned professional—and those only through bad injuries—was handed the semifinal decision by referee Al Morelli because of eye-gougings and general rule-violations by Chief Little Moose.

The Hollander, however, waived the disqualification, and Little Moose, not to be outdone in courtesy and with only four minutes to go, managed to stay.

In the lead-ups, Max Goldberg toppled John Schaeffer in 7m. 18s.; Leo Hyatt, former "Gold Secret," won over Joe Allerio in 11 04; Steve Brady and Freddy Moran drew; Red O'Dell tossed Stan Stickney in 12 03, and Hermi Olson floored Odilio Marchioni in 12 28.

FAME FLEETING ASK RED GRANGE

2 DAYS WITHOUT AUTOGRAPH

By Murray Kramer

Harold Grange is the assistant coach of the Chicago Bears.

The name probably will not even appear on the program Sunday when the Bears meet the Redskins at Fenway Park.

Yet this Grange person, known as "Red", was one of the greatest backs that ever lived and certainly the most publicized.

His appearance meant public adulation, packed stadiums, banquets and reams of newspaper copy. But here he is now as just an assistant to George Halas. He has been in Boston two days now and has not had a single request for an autograph.

Red Grange

But this gradual trip back from the publicity heights to a much subordinate role does not phase our hero of yesteryear.

Red is happy and, as long as he can be connected with football every fall, he will never care whether he is ever mentioned in another newspaper.

When asked how it felt to be sitting on the bench after 18 years of active football, Grange said:

"It certainly seems odd to sit on the bench in street clothes.

"I keep looking at the game from an entirely different perspective, and every now and then when something goes wrong, I instinctively start as if I belonged in there again.

"As for coaching, it is tougher than playing. I take a real mental licking during every game and also a physical walloping sitting beside George Halas, my boss.

"Halas fights 97 different sorts of battles and swings from both sides. It makes little difference whether I squat at his left or right, I still get it."

Red was then interrupted to get his views on coaching in order to learn whether he had ambitions to lead a college team. Red quickly replied:

"I would certainly like to take a crack at coaching a college eleven, but, if an opportunity doesn't come along, I am not going to worry greatly as long as I am connected with the Bears."

REGULAR GUY

Red still looks young enough to get in there but the years have exacted a heavy toll from his legs, and the stern professional competition is too tough for him.

It is remarkable to see how he has graciously accepted his new role without developing a sour outlook or feeling that the world owes him an everlasting debt.

Red is a real fellow. Here's hoping he is singled out Sunday, for the carrot top certainly deserves a hand.

BRUINS BEATEN By Canadiens

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Nov. 7.—Les Canadiens squared their preseason series with the Boston Bruins by winning the fifth encounter 4 to 2.

A power play in the last two minutes fooled Tiny Thompson, Boston goalie, and brought the flying Frenchmen their margin.

Each team won two games, and one was tied in the maritime tour.

B. C. YOUNG TEAM

Most of Them Back Next Season

By Harry Downes

Head Football Coach at Boston College

As Told to Walter Riley

I can't help but be impressed with the spirit and the enthusiasm of Boston College football players.

It was the same in my day at the Heights and the same before that, and it is the same now that I am back as coach.

Our players put up all sorts of difficulties in order to play football. But we never hear a complaint.

Being a day school, most of the squad must travel long distances to get to college and back home again after practice. Which means that they seldom see home and dinner before early evening.

It is a condition which doesn't exist at a boarding college. So when these kids of ours play like they did against Michigan State and Providence and like we trust they will against Holy Cross, it makes you wonder how they do it.

And even more surprising is the many honor students Boston College numbers among its football players.

Today it is rarely the case where any member of the eleven is dropped for scholastic difficulties.

Perhaps the reason is that they want to play football and have been repeatedly warned that failure to keep up in the classroom means being dropped from the squad.

The Eagles have done well this year.

They lost to Fordham, which was no disgrace. They hope to go through to the Holy Cross game without another defeat, although we are not in any way taking either Western Maryland, Springfield or Boston University lightly.

We are also hoping that the Purple survives with a clean slate. That is up to our game.

Holy Cross will doubtlessly be well backed favorite. We don't mind that. Such a condition has become almost the rule rather than the exception.

I know that, barring unexpected injuries, we will be right, particularly mentally, for the Purple.

Next year?

It doesn't pay to look too far into the future. Much can happen to ruin the most optimistic picture.

But we have a pretty fair looking freshman team. We lose only Tom Brennan, Pat Avery, Vin Keough, Captain Joe O'Brien and Ed Furbush from our present squad, and so things might be sort of looking up for us.

But we will need all the strength we can muster.

Boston College will have one stiff assignment after another. Pop Warner's Temple team succeeds Fordham on October 12, Michigan State returns for an October 31 game and a week later we meet Hunk Anderson's fine North Carolina State team. On top of that comes Holy Cross again.

So you can see that Boston College its work cut out for it.

WILSON LIKES NEAP HEAPS

Ace's Safest Bet At Gansett

Starts in Fourth Race

By Dave Wilson

(Selections Made for Fast Track)

BEST BET—NEAP

Narragansett Park, Nov. 7—Neap, in the fourth stanza, shapes up as the outstanding hazard on another difficult card of eight races here today.

FIRST RACE

Highest Point, Justa Play, Lady Pal

HIGHEST POINT outclassed this capacity field of $1000 top and bottom platers and was saved for this spot. JUSTA PLAY has a corking Empire City victory to recommend for the place award LADY PAL will figure in the spoils if she get a chance to parade postward.

SECOND RACE

Character, Stainforth, High Image

CHARACTER just missed drubbing Melody Miss only a few days back. A duplicate of that sterling performance should result in brackets. STAINFORTH is the class but he may have tailed off HIGH IMAGE is capable of upsetting the dope

THIRD RACE

All Rowes, Eyryholme, Teenie R.

ALL ROWES gets the top rating on good Agawam performances He placed to Serenabit in his most recent endeavor EYRYHOLME is coming up from a corking sprint effort behind Dalmacan The increased route should be right down his alley. TEENIE R. figures close up on best races

FOURTH RACE

Neap, Victorious Ann, Cascapedia

NEAP is a highly regarded colt He placed to Seabiscuit in his most recent effort. Whaa Hae and other good colts were behind him that day. He will relish the route VICTORIOUS ANN has plenty of class and figures to offer the sternest sort of opposition. CASCAPEDIA for the remainder

FIFTH RACE

Happy Knot, All Forlorn, Our Mae

I find it impossible to go past HAPPY KNOT in searching for the winner here. This fleet mare turned in a bang-up second to Beefsteak last time ALL FORLORN turned in a corking second to Brown Jack over a muddy strip on Saturday. OUR MAE hardly classes with the top pair, but she must be accorded at least a fighting chance

SIXTH RACE

Chimney Top, Madwind, Mettle

This is the most wide-open affair on the card CHIMNEY TOP gets the top figures on the strength of a most recent winning performance, but she is far from being a cinch. MADWIND turned in a sterling performance in drubbing El Puma and other shifty platers lasts time METTLE has won her last two starts. The others are not outmatched

SEVENTH RACE

Harlem Belle, Polly Barcarol, Crinoline

Going down into the brine basin for HARLEM BELLE. This filly has been closing a world of ground in recent sprint endeavors The increased route should suit her nicely POLLY BARCAROL shapes up as the stoutest sort of a contender on best New York races. CRINOLINE will like the route

EIGHTH RACE

Salut D'Amour, Platinum Blonde, Ceylon

Winner of his last in fast time SALUT D'AMOUR, always hard to beat when in the running mood, should lead the way home in the nightcap event. PLATINUM BLONDE, second in his last start and nearing top form, should offer the contention, with CEYLON, a speedy trick, taking the show However, the race is kind of an open event

WARNER Fooled by TEMPLE

CARNERA HITS HIGH SPOTS

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 7—Here is how Michigan State outsmarted Pop Warner, football's original old fox, to stop Temple's winning streak last week:

Because the Owls did not wear numerals on the front of their jerseys the Michigan Staters had trouble spotting the Temple backs in the tricky Warner shifts.

So Sid Wagner, the Spartan candidate for All-America guard, brought a piece of black chalk into the game . . . After the first few scrimmages every Temple back had a large black X on his white shirt front . . . Also, Wagner was armed with a piece of lipstick he was going to use if Pop crossed him up and numbered all his boys . . . Wagner was frisked plenty by the Owls, who never did discover he carried his marking materials in the cuff of his jersey

Primo Vs. Buddy

Primo Carnera is hitting the hot spots occasionally . . . Jimmy Johnston is thinking of matching him with Buddy Baer . . . Stan Kosta likes pro football better because there are fewer dressing room lectures to listen to.

This will be Ken Strong's last season as a regular player . . . He's getting too brittle . . . Eastern fans wish Princeton could get out of that agreement with Yale and be open to a Rose Bowl bid.

Rival coaches are pouring the heat on Howard Jones, whose Southern California team isn't clicking . . . Orders for the boys opposing U. S. C. are to go out and pile up every point they can . . . Which is one way of getting even for those one-sided 44-0 victories the Trojans used to roll up when they were riding high, wide and handsome

Kelly Writing

Shades of that famous Natick Mass., dynasty in Harvard football —Donovan, Mahan and Casey A Harvard fellow named Shaun Kelly sent a letter to be read at a pacifist meeting . . . Captain of the football team too . . . Some of the alumni are weeping

Ten of the 11 starters in the Marquette lineup are Wisconsin boys . . . The only alien is Fullback Ward Cuff of Minnesota . . . George Sisler, Jr., son of the old baseball star, won letters in four major sports at prep school . . . He is ticketed for Colgate

Sixto Escobar, the fighter wants a six-toed kitten for a mascot . . . Get in touch with Lou Brix, his manager . . . Don't overlook the Southwest conference when casting about for Rose Bowl candidates

CADDEL, Hutson Tied FOR PRO LEAD

By Universal Service

New York, Nov 7—Ernie Caddel, of the Detroit Lions, and Don Hutson, of the Green Bay Packers are tied for scoring honors in the National Professional Football League, according to statistics released today.

Caddel, former Stanford half back, and Hutson, who gained fame as the receiving end of Alabama's Howell-to-Hutson pass combination, have each scored six touchdowns for a total of 36 points.

Dale Burnett, injured New York Giants end, is tied for third with Ralph Kercheval, of the Brooklyn Dodgers

Both have scored 30 points—Burnett with five touchdowns, and Kercheval with two touchdowns four field goals and six points after touchdowns

Luke Johnson, Chicago Bears' end, and Red Pollock, Baer back, are next with 24 each.

Caddell also tops the ground gainers with a total of 328 yards gained in 48 attempts, for an average of 6.8 yards per try

BOSTWICK Horse Wins CLASSIC

By Associated Press

Liverpool, Eng., Nov. 7—Castle Irwell, owned by the American polo star and amateur rider G. H. (Pete) Bostwick today won the Grand Sefton Steeplechase at two miles 7½ furlongs.

Castle Irwell won by six lengths from G. W. Chesterman's Cranford St. Andrew, with John Hay Whitney's American-owned Rod and Gun third.

Six horses started, but only four finished. Jesse Metcalf's American-owned Kiltol fell at one of the jumps. The remaining American-owned entries, Whitney's Double Crossed and J. B. Snow's Delachance, were scratched.

Castle Irwell was a 3-to-1 shot in the betting. Both Cranford St. Andrew and Rod and Gun were held at 100 to 8.

'Slip' Madigan's Gaels in N. Y.

New York, Nov. 7 (INS)—Coach Edward P. "Slip" Madigan, mentor of the St. Mary's Galloping Gaels, said today his team was in great shape and expects to "take" Fordham in their intersectional game at the Polo Grounds Saturday

"We have been extremely fortunate regarding injuries this season," Madigan said. "Any injuries suffered by the squad have been minor."

Reviewing the coast football situation, Madigan said he thinks Washington has a slight edge in its game with California Saturday.

"Those leading coast teams—Washington, California, Stanford, Ucla, Santa Clara and my team —re so evenly matched that in a round robin match they would probably all be licked at least once," Madigan said.

LYMAN BRUSIE LIKES THE RUNNERS

GOING TO FLORIDA SOON

By Ed Cogswell

Narragansett Park Race Track, R. I., Nov. 7—"The running horse sport has surely been good to me the year that I have been in it."

Thus said Trainer Lyman Bruise as he was saddling Moane Keala for the race at hand.

"At present I have 14 horses in my stable, and in the last 12 months have not missed having a busy day," continued Brusie, who with his father, Henry Brusie, gained the reputation of being the leading trainers of trotters in New England.

"It is my plan to ship from 'Gansett to the Florida tracks for the winter months.

"Yes, it is much easier to train runners than the light harness horse.

HANDLE MORE

"With trotters and pacers the trainer has to ride many a mile each day in the sulky, which, I can tell you, is no easy job. With runners, the exercise boys attend to that while the jockeys do the racing.

"All of this means that the trainer can handle a much larger stable of thoroughbreds than of trotters without being worn out physically.

"The difference in the mode of training and developing speed in the runners is that they are prepared for single dashes, while the trotters have to be shaped up to go races of three or more heats."

Many of the old-time admirers of trotters are still scratching their heads in wonderment in the rapid drop from the sporting picture of their favorite, as for three-quarters of a century all racing in New England was conducted by promoters of the light harness horse.

WELCH SEER

Back in the days of Readville track, it was Andy Welch who declared for pari-mutuel betting at trotting meetings and dash races He said then that the future of the sport surely laid in this direction

In his effort to put through the dash for heat events the $50,000 handicap for trotters at a dash of a mile and upward was inaugurated, the largest sum ever offered at either a running or trotting track in New England.

This race was decided over Readville and was won by Allan Winter, driven by the late Lon McDonald It drew the biggest crowd ever at a straight trotting meeting in the East

"And everybody interested in trotters thought Welch was crazy," said Harry Brusie.

Time has shown that had the promoters kept in advance of the times there is no question but they might be riding high and handsome right now. When the public will so largely support both dog and thoroughbred racing, there is a reason for the fadeout of the trotters.

HAWKS, AMERKS OPEN ICE SEASON

CHABOT Has Broken LEG

MIKE KARKAS IN GOAL

By Universal Service

Chicago, Nov. 7—With both teams on edge for a swift game of zip and "click" — the "click," fans, is the beloved sound produced by the contact of stick and puck—the new season of the National Hockey League opens here tonight, when the Chicago Blackhawks meet the New York Americans.

The Gotham invaders, of course, are full of confidence—but so, for that matter, are the Blackhawks, garbed in their snappy new uniforms.

Viewing his charges in practice, Major Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the Hawks, said:

"I'm very pleased with the way the team shapes up, and to me it looks a lot stronger than last year. It has, I think, a good chance for the league championship.

NEW MEN

"I believe Norm Locking and Donie McFayden will be as good as if not better than Couture or Kendall.

"They're both big and strong and able to block and take a man out of play. If they do that, we won't worry."

Trainer Eddie Froelich echoed the major's sentiments, saying that the boys are in top shape—"the best in which any Blackhawk squad has been so early in the season."

Clem Loughlin, manager, gave his men last-minute instructions, and had them work on a series of forward line moves.

At least one Hawk newcomer will greet the Americans on the icy field of hot battle at the Chicago stadium—young Mike Karkas, goaler. He will guard the net in the absence of Lorne Chabot, who is nursing a broken leg at a hospital.

MORENZ HURT

Howie Morenz, center, seems to have his usual speed, but wrenched back muscles prevented him from doing anything in the way of shooting. His place, between Mush March and Johnny Gottselig, may be taken by Eddie Ouelette, a "comer" from London.

All indications point to the best opening day crowd in recent years. Almost all boxes are sold for the entire season, and a record order for reserved chairs has been turned in.

In tonight's crowd will be Frank Calder, president of the National Hockey League.

Charlie Brickley's Son Kicks 'Em Just Like His Dear Old Dad

Tied Game Saturday

BY BOOTING THE POINT AFTER

Another hoary sporting adage is in the wastebasket today.

This rule decreed that sons of famous athletes were never equal to the prowess of their fathers.

Ty Cobb was accounted among baseball's immortals, but his son didn't even like the game. He preferred tennis.

Walter Hagen is golf's greatest money player even today, although his rivals hate to admit it. His son, while playing some golf, prefers baseball and football.

These are typical of hundreds of cases where sons cause their fathers to grow a trifle shamefaced

But today we present Charles, Jr., and John, sons of Harvard's immortal Charlie Brickley, probably the greatest dropkicker football has ever known.

IT'S OVER

Both boys are members of the football squad at Babylon high school, Babylon, L. I., and are accounted among the mainstays of the eleven

Charles Jr., is emulating his famous father in a halfback role.

Only last Saturday he made the role stick by handing his team a point after touchdown with an accurate and effortless dropkick.

The payoff on the point was that it saved his team from losing the game with Bay Shore high school.

Charlie's team was behind 7-0 until one of his mates scored

With the pressure on, the son demonstrated he was just as good as his famous father, pumping the tying point through the bars.

And no one was happier about it than Charlie, Sr., who figuratively thumbed a scornful nose at adages and such.

NEVER MISSED

The Harvard scores came through five dropkicks, all propelled through the goal posts by the gifted Brickley toe.

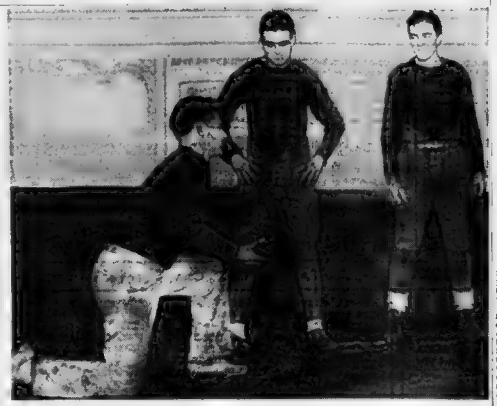

He never missed.

Before the game he had handed Yale a psychological swat that probably lost them the game.

Stepping out on the field he mehdoically kicked field goals from all kinds of difficult angles, starting near the goal and moving out to the 50-yard line.

He was an unquestioned All-America selection in 19112 and 1913 and would probably have repeated in 1914 but appendicitis ruined his chance to play

Charlie was a native of Everett and was educated in the schools there before going on to Exeter and Harvard.

ARCLIGHT School Game AT DILBOY

By Will Connell

A school football feature is on the bill tonight, with Somerville High tackling Malden Catholic at Dilboy Field at 8 o'clock, under floodlights.

Catholic, one of the few unbeaten and untied groups, faces its hardest test of the year. A small school with less than 300 boys enrolled, it steps into the David role against a Goliath in Somerville

The latter seemed mediocre starting, but two weeks back toppled Norwood, and last Saturday drubbed Lawrence by three touchdowns. Frank Zammarchi, Somerville quarterback, passed Lawrence to defeat and will try to do the same to Catholic.

Charley Dickerman's ace pilot is one of the best pitchers in the state and also is a star running back He'll be the big gun in the attack against Catholic.

The Malden team, coached by Brother Baptist and Brother Vincent, has allowed only Angel Guardian to score on it.

Catholic boasts one of the best school backs in Walter Wishoski, quarterback. John Hackett, Dave Walsh and other Catholic backs also are efficient workers. They'll give Somerville plenty of trouble.

Reserve strength gives Somerville the edge While Catholic has a first team of average school size, the replacements lack weight.

Skibos Look Like Champs, But Just Don't Win 'Em

By Walter Kiley

They're calling Carnegie Tech the nation's "mystery team."

Why? Because they look like champions, play like champions, run and pass like champions, yet drop games which by every conceivable right they should win.

Carnegie has lost four of six games this season. On the face of things, this record is far from awe-inspiring

Yet Dr. Eddie Anderson, Holy Cross coach, is not being fooled the least little bit by scores.

The Purple has been preparing for Saturday's game with the Pittsburgh club for months. It has scouted Carnegie thoroughly, one line coach, Jim Harris, trekking out to the Mid-West pastures to bring back all available data.

YOU TELL ONE

Tech beat Case, 6-3, in the opener. Next came Notre Dame, the latter just beginning to slip into high gear.

Carnegie, they do say, outplayed the "Irish" in the opening half and forced the issue throughout, losing eventually 14-3.

Along came New York University, a team which at this moment is one of four Eastern elevens still undefeated and untied.

N. Y. U. hit Carnegie like a Florida cyclone. The Violets won [illegible].

Next was Pop Warner's Temple and another loss, this time 13-0. Matters looked dark and dreary

But Purdue, a Mid-West gant which had already toppled Fordham 20-0, was surprisingly humbled 7-0, the major shock of that particular Saturday.

Who then thought that Duquesne would take Carnegie? But it did last Saturday 7-0 and the funny part of it, according to Harris, is that Tech ran, passed and lateral-passed all over the winners. And he can't yet account for the Pittsburgh team's defeat.

Howard Harpster is coach of the Purple rivals.

It was he who was termed "the greatest quarterback of all time" by Knute Rockne when Harpster was calling the signals for Carnegie.

They claim that he has equipped this team with all the fancy frills of the most modern game, trick plays and laterals surprising even Andy Kerr and his Colgate team at the latter's very best.

Be that as it may the fact remains that Carnegie is anxious to beat Holy Cross on Saturday and Holy Cross is, if anything, more anxious to beat Carnegie.

Tech is coming to play in New England for the first time. Naturally it wants to make in fine impression, if for no other reason than to show that western football is superior to eastern, a claim frequently made.

The Purple has ambitious ideas. It seeks a big-time schedule. Carnegie Tech is just one of several teams, including Colgate and Dartmouth which will be played next year, which the Purple looks to be stepping stones to national fame.

HEARST Rifle Entries POUR IN

158 ENTER ON FIRST DAY

By Lieut.-Col. Jess Kreuger

New York, Nov. 7—Twenty-four hours after the War Department had issued official instructions for conducting the 15th annual rifle matches for the William Randolph Hearst trophies, 158 teams had submitted their entries, according to announcement made today.

This constitutes a new record for speed in entering and [illegible] promise of shattering the [illegible] total of competing Cadet teams which reached [illegible]

Staff officers of the chief of infantry, in Washington, who are in charge of the matches, expressed confidence that when complete lists of entries have been received from the commanding generals of the nine army corps headquarters, there will be more than 550 teams entered from the nation's universities, colleges, military academies and high schools

TECH IN

Due to the widespread competition and interest in the Hearst matches they are generally accepted as determining the marksmanship championships among R. O. T. C. cadet units throughout the country.

Distinction of being the first to send their entries goes to the University of Minnesota.

Seven teams will compete from this school. Four teams were entered by the University of Illinois, University of Nebraska, Georgia School of Technology and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Among the schools which registered three teams are the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Cornell University, University of Pittsburgh, Howard University, Fordham University and Iowa State College

Among senior schools entering one or more teams are University of Georgia Presbyterian College, New York University, University of Tennessee, University of Dayton, Ohio State University, Gettysburg College, Rutgers University, Michigan State College, Western Maryland College, University of Akron, West Virginia University, MASSACHUSETTS STATE COLLEGE, St. John's College of Washington, D. ADAMS EXPLAINS BRAVES TANGLE

AND CONFERENCE CONTINUES

By Joe Cashman

The Braves will have plenty of money. Or else.

That's all that was officially announced after Charles F. Adams, majority tribal stockholder, Major Francis P. Murphy of Nashua and other interested parties had conferred [illegible] night.

[illegible] successfully defying all ef- [illegible]

"We're progressing nicely," Adams began his opening report. "Our purpose is to get the stockholders to contribute enough to furnish sufficient capital for a winning ball club.

"If we don't succeed, we can't continue. But it looks now as though we would pull through.

CHUMMY

"We are determined to keep it a family affair. I mean we want all the fresh money to be supplied by present stockholders.

"If we wanted to take in outside capital, we could quickly get more than we need. We won't do this for several reasons, including legal technicalities.

"So our task is to contact the various stockholders and learn how much, if any, they'll contribute. Most of those with whom we have talked appear enthusiastic.

"One man, in a hurry to get off to Pinehurst, made it a point to inform us he wanted to invest $25,000.

"Major Murphy is 100 per cent. He's acting, however, solely in the vote of an individual stockholder willing to do his share or more to put the Braves back on their feet.

"I won't be an officer or act in any official capacity if the reorganization plans go through. I have too many other interests which demand my time.

"That's the whole story at the moment."

The story thus far doesn't jibe with Major Murphy's expressed hope of gaining control of the club. [illegible] the door would appear to be open to the Nashua sportsman being the dominant factor in the [illegible]

It's probable, if present plans go through, that Murphy will supply a large portion of the new capital and become president, if not majority stockholder

At any rate, with considerable money already invested in the franchise and a strong desire to invest more, it's virtually certain that the Major will see to it that the reorganization plan doesn't fail through and will play a leading part in deciding the future policies of the club, especially since Adams is determined to remain far in the background.

BOB QUINN

Our guess is that when the tangle is finally unravelled, Murphy will be the "prexy," Bob Quinn the business manager and Bill McKechnie the field boss.

It's the safest of bets that Quinn will return to the Boston baseball scene that proved so depressing for him during his decade at Fenway Park. All that remains to be done is to get his signatohe on a contract he is most anxioos to sign.

Both Murphy and Adams regard Bob as the smartest baseball mind in the majors.

It's also virtually certain that there'll be enough money available to enable McKechnie to bid as much as any rival for stars and put the club back in the National League flag running.

TECH BOOTERS To Meet Tufts

Encouraged by their first win of the season, the Tech soccer team is now aiming for victories over Tufts and Harvard on the next two successive Saturdays.

Bill Wu, center, is still considered by Coach Goldie as his mainstay on the offensive play. Ed Brittenham, the hefty fullback, bears the brunt of the opponent's attack on the defensive.

HUNTINGTON Plays Tufts '39

After beating Thayer academy last Monday, Huntington school's gridsters will try to annex their second victory within five days against Tufts freshmen at Huntington field, Brookline, tomorrow afternoon.

Coach Tom Blake plans to star the following eleven: Josephson, Files, ends; Thayer, Ginge, tackles; Miller, Lavrakas, guards; Laurinsky, center, and in the backfield Canner, McNaught, Watson and Lewis.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

Monster of the Sea

Boston Man Faces Leviathan of Deep in Dangerous Situation

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY:

This adventurers Club column is beginning to get some pretty famous people on its membership list. Today for instance, we have a yarn from Jonah.

Of course, the original Jonah has been dead for so long that not even a whale would take him for a tempting morsel, but a modern Jonah is a different matter entirely. Particularly if he's a succulent tid bit of a ten-year-old boy like Fil Arsenault of 12 Milford street, Boston.

FLOYD GIBBONS

Fil became a Jonah in the summer of 1899, when he was living with his parents near East Bideford Prince Edward Island, Canada. His home then was located on what is called the Narrows, a strip of water between the shore of Prince Edward Island, and Lenox Island, a small patch of land in the middle of Richmond Bay.

That strip of water was about half a mile wide, with a deep channel running along one side of it. And about 200 yards straight out from where Fil lived, there was a large oyster bed.

It was while Fil was digging around in this oyster bed, that he—well—sort of got mixed up in an adventure that looked like nothing so much as a page or two out of the Old Testament.

It was a hot August day, and Fil and his younger brother set out on an expedition to Lenox Island in the family dory. They reached the island, spent most of the day gathering nuts and berries, and then started for home again.

They were half-way back when they noticed a great black blob of something or other floating on the water.

They wondered what it was at the time—thought it might be an old boat, floating bottom up and then they forgot all about it as they neared the oyster beds and decided they'd stop there for some oysters before going home.

Neither one of the two kids could swim, but the beds were located on a sand bar where the water was only two feet deep at low tide, so they anchored the dory and went overboard after some of those tasty mollusks that look so good on the half-shell with horseradish sauce on the side.

For half an hour Fil searched the bed and in doing so, got quite a distance away from the dory and from his brother.

He had filled a basket with oysters, and was about to go back to the dory when suddenly he heard a noise a strange hissing noise, like the sound of escaping steam.

That sound was followed by a jet of spray that rose from the water about 30 feet in front of him, and for a minute Fil thought it was one of those water spouts he'd often read of in books about the sea.

But he didn't hold to that theory very long, for as he watched, spellbound, the source of that spouting mist, broke the surface of the water before his very eyes.

It was that big, black blob that Fil and his younger brother had taken for an overturned boat. It rose to the surface, still spouting clouds of mist and began to move toward Fil.

And as it came on, it rose higher in the water. A pair of eyes—eyes that looked large as dinner plates to Fil Arsenault—appeared above the surface.

They were followed by a huge, gaping mouth, as big as a barn door. No mistaking that big black blob now. A whale! And it looked as though Fil was slated for the role of a second Jonah.

For a few seconds, Fil stood paralyzed with fright. Then he started walking backward, away from the advancing monster. He held that basket of oysters in front of him, ready to thrust it into the big brute's mouth if it came too close for comfort, but he never got to the point of doing that.

For just then the water deepened. He had come to the edge of the bar. Between him and the land was a stretch of water seven feet deep in places—and Fil couldn't swim.

"I learned to swim," says Fil, "in that one terrible moment. Dropping the basket, I floundered out into deep water, and somehow, I managed to get across it.

"When I came to the next shallow spot I looked back. The whale didn't seem to have gained on me. It lay there on the surface, it's hideous mouth still open showing teeth a foot long, its eyes dull and sorrowful. Maybe that big thing out there wasn't interested in me at all. Heartened by the idea, I pushed on toward the next deep spot in the water."

Fil swallowed a quart or two of water going over the next deep spot, but somehow he managed to make it. Several times in that awful trip to shore he thought he must surely drown, but each time he got across into shallow water again.

When, finally, he reached the shore and dragged himself up on the tideway, he was completely exhausted. The minute he was clear out of the water he dropped on the sand and then—everything went black.

By the time Fil came to again, the water was full of boats and small craft of every description. All the neighbors were out, armed with guns and axes, hammering away at that poor old whale that had got himself stuck on a sand bar. They finally killed him and cut him up for the blubber and sperm oil they could get out of him. That was the last of the whale that tried to make a Jonah out of Fil Arsenault.

Well, sir, it isn't often that one of our Distinguished Adventurers has to fight a whale for his title and his ten bucks. I'd say Fil Arsenault earned both of them. You other boys and girls can get in under the wire a lot easier than Fil did, with a simple story of some thrill that came to you in your own home or in your own office.

Floyd Gibbons, famous war correspondent, author and adventurer, wants YOU to collaborate with him in writing the story of YOUR most thrilling moment. Floyd believes that everyone has had at least one hair-raising adventure. He is bringing the adventurers of Boston together in a city-wide Adventurers' Club, and he wants YOU to become a member. You can join simply by sending your adventure story in to Floyd. And the only membership fee is the $10 that Floyd pays YOU for every story he prints in his column. YOU can win prizes for your story, too. For details, see next column.

LISTENERS FOR RADIO COMEDY STANDARD

By N. F. T.

Keep the mouth free from contamination! Well meant emphasis on that score continually assails the patient American air audience.

Announcers cry out to us at almost every turn of our lighted dials. Then comes the entertainment.

But hark there! Methinks an echo is in the wind—Keep the mouth free from contamination! It's the rising voice of listeners on the rebound. People are protesting to program planners who permit otherwise popular "mike" figures to indulge off-color comedy, if comedy it can be called.

ADMONISHING ARTISTS

Lately there is a widespread feeling apparent among loudspeaker patrons, more than a few thousand of them loyal Boston Evening American readers, that an ever increasing measure of anything but delectable humor is worming a way into the radio scheme of things. Suggestive and breezy stories are perhaps pardonable, if they more or less pep up the theater, night club atmosphere and even the work-a-day world, observe these not too sensitive people. They add however, that the same brand of business becomes just so much tarnished trash labeled taboo in orderly home circles.

N. F. T.

Broadcasting bosses realize and allow such above taste transition to be true of human nature. Accordingly, certain artists who persist, have had some iron clad law laid down for them very recently. Meaning they may well reflect a bit in the matter of about how far to go while trying to be funny. As the modern figure of speech has it —or else!

SO-LONG SALUTE

In honor of Helen Jepson's farewell appearance on the "Music Hall" hour (WEEI) before departing for Hollywood, Paul Whiteman has assembled an impressive list of guest stars including Frederick Jagel, Metropolitan Opera star; Bob Burns, hill billy comedian; Art Tatem, famous blind pianist, and the Pickens Sisters, all in line for the airing tonight at 10:00 p. m.

* * *

Rose Bampton, gifted contralto of concert and opera, will be the guest soloist during the semi-classic setting with William Daly's Orchestra (WNAC) this evening from 8:30 to 9.

Miss Bampton will feature Bizet's gay "Gypsy Song" from "Carmen" and Tschaikovsky's famous melody, "None but the Lonely Heart" to the poem by Goethe.

VALLEE VARIETIES

Miriam Hopkins returns to radio for her first engagement since last spring to head Rudy Vallee's weekly variety hour bill (WEEI) on the stroke of 8 o'clock tonight. Other acts in the studio show include Eddie Stanley, self-styled comedian; and Robert Wildhack, expert in laughs, sneezes and snores of all sorts.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION — TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

The Junior Birdmen Air Course booklet, containing reprints of Lessons 27 to 52 inclusive and complete with illustrations, will be available soon for members of the Boston wing, according to an announcement by national headquarters in New York.

These reprints represent the last half of the unusually interesting and instructive course of study in aviation prepared by experts of the U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce at Washington, D. C., under direction of the chief of the bureau, Eugene L. Vidal.

The lessons include instructions on how to fly solo, make figure eights, chandelles, spirals, loops, rolls and forced landings; how to navigate by instruments, and discussions of weather and air commerce regulations.

The booklets can be obtained by addressing a postal to Boston wing headquarters, giving name and full address. The writer should specify whether he wants the first half or last half of the air course. Each booklet sells for five cents.

Orders are now being received. The following will obtain the first booklets, as their orders are on hand:

Thomas Card, 17 Cambria street, and Paul Cleveland, 242 Broadway, Somerville; Ted Rodgers, 156 Tremont street, Newton; Leo Sopina, Stafford Springs, Ct.; Vivian Bennett, Lockhouse road, Westfield, and Juliette Langlois, Salem Square Hotel, Worcester.

Robert Kienner, 3 Bishop street, Methuen; John Braggs, 434 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge; Abraham Tatelbaum 175 Townsend street, Roxbury; Edward Staskivicz, Apple street, Bedford; Roland Gordon, 384 Silver street, Greenfield, and W. Nichols, 50 May street, Putnam, Ct.

MOVIE MIXUPS
BY ART MOGER

NOW PLAYING AT THE PARAMOUNT AND FENWAY THEATRES

How many, please?

How many of the above movie stars can you identify correctly?

They all appear at the popular twin theaters, the Paramount and Fenway Theaters, where the screen attractions are: "Dance Band" and "Two-Fisted." Unscramble the names of these cinema celebrities from the batch of letters near their cartoon likenesses.

Fill in their names in the empty squares. Answer the question pertaining to the career of one of these celebrities. Mail your entire week's completed solutions to The Movie Mixups Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston. "Movie Mixups" is fascinating and fun for all!

Neatness, accuracy, promptness and originality in presentation may net you one of the many luxurious prizes given free by the Boston Evening American.

Forty new 1936 Automatic Tom Thumb radios, with all latest improvements, manufactured by the Automatic Radio Mfg. Co., of Boston, are distributed. Cash awards totaling $150 and 300 guest theater tickets are also given.

A grand award of the all wave, nine all metal tube Automatic Console Radio with 20 features, including "Vision Ray," radio's most modern mechanism. It actually "sees" your station selections.

You need not be a weekly winner to share in this grand award. The person sending in the most complete and correct sets of "Movie Mixups" during the entire radio tie-up will get the grand award free.

ANAEMIA

Mrs. D. Sheehan, 11 Ross St., Medford, Mass., says: "Ever since I can remember I had been anaemic. I was weak, easily tired, had swollen limbs and trouble with my thyroid gland. Mr. John Riley, a relative, told me how Dr. Walsh had helped him when he has suffered with neuritis. Acting upon his advice I had Dr. Walsh treat me. Now I no longer feel weak or have fainting spells, thanks to Dr. Walsh, and I am glad to make this statement that others who suffer as I did may know where to go for relief." Signed Mrs. Dennis Sheehan.

The Spirit of '76

The Spirit of '35

Two contrasting pictures today offer us subjects for SERIOUS THOUGHT.

One shows "The Spirit of '76," after the historic painting preserved at Marblehead.

The other is the conception of SOME Williams College students of "The Spirit of '35" with the Nazi flag prominently shown, Old Glory missing.

Chinese philosophy tells us "one picture is worth a thousand words."

This was certainly not overstating the facts about the pictures above.

Both of these pictures seem to us worth MANY thousands of words.

"The Spirit of '76" deserves only praise for the inspiration it has afforded down through the years to patriotic Americans.

"The Spirit of '35"—what WORDS would YOU use to describe that?

"The Spirit of '35" was designed as a "burlesque" on "The Spirit of '76," and was intended to discredit the teachers' loyalty oath and saluting of the American flag in the schools.

A burlesque is only a comparison.

To put the comparison squarely before you, we publish BOTH PICTURES.

What do YOU think of "The Spirit of '35"?

Canada's New Leader

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

The flags are flying in Ottawa, and the echoes of the cannon which saluted the new Governor-General of our great neighbor to the north have barely died away.

With appropriate pomp and ceremony, the Dominion receives "the person of the King in Canada," Lord Tweedsmuir.

It is not, however, as Baron Tweedsmuir, or even Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada that this writer takes a special pleasure in presenting his compliments.

Primarily, they are extended to Mr. John Buchan, brilliant historian and novelist. This scholarly and very human Scotsman belongs to that great company of Caledonian writers which includes Sir Walter Scott, Robert Louis Stevenson, and others.

GREAT ROMANCER

Long before his shoulder received the touch of King George's sword he was described as the greatest romancer since Stevenson. His seat in the House of Lords, his present eminence as the personal representative of the Crown in Canada are, after all, merely the decoration of a splendid career in literature.

The present master of Rideau Hall, the palace of the Governor-General in Ottawa, has been lawyer, soldier, business man, novelist, historian, essayist, poet and member of Parliament.

But writing is his first love. If you have ever ferreted through the pages of Oliver Cromwell, you have enjoyed one of the most human studies of the Great Protector which has ever been written.

His monograph on the massacre of Glencoe, his thrilling tale of the revenge which the Hanoverians took in the tragic Scottish glen for the Jacobite rebellions. And his "History of English Literature" is more readable than Taine's.

TO ENCHANTED REGIONS

In "Green Mantle," "Path of the King," "Three Hostages," "Gap in the Curtain," "Courts of the Morning," and many other such tales which have robbed men of sleep, he quite magically transports his readers from the dull, drab business of life to enchanted regions where gallant gentlemen peril their lives for fair ladies, and black villains are brought to their proper deserts.

His four-volume "History of the Great War" stands pre-eminent in its field.

And John Buchan, Lord Tweedsmuir, is one with James Bryce in his sympathetic understanding of the American character, and of American institutions generally. In one of his recent novels, "The Courts of the Morning," he exposes seemingly something of his own thought toward us by these words, which he puts in the mouth of one of his characters:

"Thereafter Mr. Wilbur discoursed of his nation, its native strength, and its weakness, its native intelligence, its imperfect manners and great heart."

He was a critic but he was also an enthusiast. To this man grown old in foreign lands in his country's service, America was still the America of his youth.

ENGLISH CHARACTER

America only needed interest to be loved, but he found it hard to get her true worth across the footlights.

"You English," he said, "have got a neat, hard-shell national character with a high gloss on it. Foreigners may not like it, but they can't mistake it.

"It hits them in the eye every time, but we are young and growing and have a lot of loose edges, and it is mighty hard to make people understand that often when we talk foolishness, we mean wisdom, and when we act high and mighty and rile our neighbors, it is because we are so busy trying to get a deal through we haven't time to think of susceptibilities."

In another page in the same novel he makes another character say:

"No power or alliance of powers could conquer America. Has she any friends on the globe except Britain? Most countries will flatter her, and kowtow to her and borrow monies from her, but they hate her like hell.

"The United States have reached the biggest crisis in their history. They have got wealth and power, but they have lost the close national integration they had when they were poorer. Their best men are laboring like galley-slaves to discipline their country. They have to give it an adequate law and a proper public service."

A Threat to the States

Better Codes Needed

FREQUENTLY popular liberties are lost through the subtle manipulations of politicians who publicly pay lip service to the fundamental guarantees of the Constitution.

Sometimes, these maneuvers are overlooked because they are hidden in highly technical new statutes.

In this connection, the public should be vigilant at the next session of Congress when it is understood that bills will be introduced to make MUNICIPAL BONDS and perhaps THE OBLIGATIONS OF THE STATES themselves SUBJECT TO THE SUPERVISION OF A FEDERAL BUREAU.

If the access of American States and municipalities to the money market is to be at the discretion of the Federal Government, then THE SUBSTANCE OF STATES' RIGHTS WILL HAVE SUBTLY DISAPPEARED UNDER OUR VERY EYES.

The proper manner to bring governmental financing up to the standards required of private corporations is through concurrent action by the States.

Each of the forty-eight States should enact laws imposing upon their security-issuing divisions an improving code of ethics and of financial prudence.

Unless the remedy is sought in this manner, instead of through Federal coercion, our fundamental form of government will have been radically altered.

Potato Act Hit

Farmers Protest

The feature of the Boston hearing on the AAA potato control plan this week was the solid front presented by aroused farmers.

Federal officials found it necessary to try to soothe the irate agriculturists by promising Congress would amend objectionable features of the act.

But how can they KNOW this?

Firmly the faith of our farmers is fixed on the Supreme Court since it upset the NRA.

This was illustrated when bursts of applause greeted one farmer's promise that Rhode Island would test the potato law before the land's highest tribunal.

Our Idle Acres

Work for Thousands

Secretary Harris A. Reynolds of the Massachusetts Forest and Park Association offers an ambitious "work and wages" program.

He urges reforesting the more than a million acres now designated as the Bay State's "waste lands."

Permanent jobs for 20,000—as well as work for their children and grandchildren—is visioned in the reforesting.

Surely the plan merits serious study by State officials.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Nov. 7—Every large city has them but nowhere are they so plentiful as in New York —the night lobby cadgers. Suave, easy-going, well dressed, they never cross the line that separates the polite pickings of their trade from harsher flim-flamming.

Several hundred are able to live comfortably through the sheer cordiality of their contacts with the lonely stranger to town and without facing the danger of arrest. They are adroit in striking up an acquaintance that leads to an invitation to drink.

O. O. McIntyre

And once this progress is made they have little difficulty in so ingratiating themselves that a small loan is seldom refused. Sometimes a fiver or tenner and never more than a $20. Some have percentage arrangements with bars and cabarets to which they pilot visitors.

The truth is that many are agreeable fellows who really know the city. Honest detectives tolerate them. Usually the approach is to ask for a light. I am told they are mostly without police records, often married and with families. O. Henry's gentle grafters.

Baldness is an affliction that has cut short a number of stage ambitions. At least it has sent juveniles into other roles. The proximity of the audience permits no hirsute deceptions. But the screen has abolished this terror.

Some of the appealing portrayers of Romeo as well as swashbuckling roles are pretty near baldness. Such as Pat O'Brien, Fred Astaire, Bing Crosby, Sidney Blackmer, Edmond Breese, Tom Mix and Conrad Nagle.

All wear toupees on duty. I love this. I'm on the edge of being in the market for a "marmoste" myself.

I have wondered if graciousness toward the public is an actual box-office asset. Certainly no one is more diffident to the proletariat than Garbo. Yet she's the most highly paid. Constance Bennett is certainly not dripping sweetness and light for her public. And Richard Mansfield was insufferable in contracts.

Maud Adams was also a shunner, even with interviewers most players court. Chaplin is gracious enough, but thoroughly independent. It would seem if one has enormous histrionic talent, there is little need for obeisance toward paying customers.

The horse is having at least a slight vogue again. On seasonable and crisp afternoons in Central Park there are often a dozen fancy vehicular turn-outs drawn by smartly cobbed and harnessed steppers—sometimes spanking bays, a Stanhope pulled tandem, the single trotters and pacers hitched to spindly pneumatic tired carts and two seaters.

Owners, fittingly attired, drive while uniformed coachmen sit, status-like, beside them. One turn-out with a matronly Mary-Boland-looking driver was an arrangement in black and white. Black trotter, white lines and bridle, black run-about with white wheel spokes and a snow-white rug.

This is a topic for a triple-jointed essay by Emily Post. Locius Beebe and Cholly Knickerbocker. That is the spread of gum-chewing among the ermine-wrapped ladies in public—especially at first nights.

It was particularly stressed at the notable premiere of "Jubilee," high spot of such goings on to date. Four women whose names grace the social register were unashamedly among the jaw-waggers. Some say the indulgence is to stifle a cigarette craving.

It's difficult these days for ladies to sit through an entire act without a few inhales. At the Colony recently I saw gum passed around as casually as toothpicks in a country hotel.

Thingumabobs: Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone had the privilege of a private elevator when autograph packs got too close at the Waldorf . . . Dashiell Hammett gets much of his dialogue material around owl lunch wagons . . .

Grover Whalen is a 6 a. m. riser . . . Morton Downey, on evenings off, sings Irish songs for friends . . . Tad, the cartoonist, admired King Lardner's writing more than that of any other contemporary.

She stepped out of a tricky little bar in the East 40's before dusk, smartly clad, slightly dizzy and seemingly bemused by youth's eternal query "Where now? . . .

As I approached she opened her vanity. Love is as good as the individual who feels it—and no better. Love is—what-are-you and what-have-you?

Love may be a prayer—a song a blessing. Or it may be a coward's hide-away . . . an egotist's sounding board . . . a sentimentalist's alibi . . . a glutton's greedy snatch.

Love is sometimes a glorious partnership—but, far oftener, a habit which we are too lazy or timid to break. And, sometimes, a drawn-out spite contest.

Jealousy has no place in love—no justification. Nor has meddling, nor possessive domineering.

These things are cancerous growths on the body of love which will surely destroy it. "Charity covers a multitude of sins"—but love camouflages a whole hell full.

WHY MANY QUIT

Real love is the noblest opportunity in life, the most gallant adventure, the most consecrated service, the sweetest comfort . . . our closest pact with God.

But most of us expect it to be a toe-dance with jazz accompaniment, or a continuous solo broadcast. And quit when we find it isn't.

There is no discipline as stern as the discipline of love, no relation as complete, no monotony as wearing, no sacrifice as cruel. It is the most civilized of all our performances. And because it is, the best of us can work at it but for short periods only.

But work at it we must, if we would achieve it. For love is never a finished job . . . never an satisfactory. We are always blundering, always failing, always disappointing and being disappointed.

We rush to each other in a great flame of longing, believing that all will be well if we can only keep this fire alight.

Yet, strangely, the deepest, strongest and most lasting bonds of love are achieved in those hours when the heart is quite cool and only the mind carries on . . . in hours, even, when we actually dislike each other and keep faith only by conscious, painful effort!

NOT GREATEST THING

No one can love all the time. Love, like all the rest of life, follows the inexorable law of work and rest, rise and fall, sleep and awakening.

The tide comes—the tide goes —and no sane man will try to stop it.

Love would be speedily wrecked by its own intensity if it did not have its periods of utter indifference—even of determined withdrawal.

Love is not "the greatest thing in life." Life is the greatest thing in life. Beware of love that cries that "life is well lost"—and of a "perfectly happy" marriage that shuts life away. Such love is not a blessing that a ghastly blight.

No healthy spirit can exist in it, no self-respecting spirit would endure it. No love that does not make life richer, wider, taller, is worthy of the name.

And therein lies that certain test of love which we are always craving. Does love make you braver, more honest, more eager to live?

Does it make you willing to face those challenges you have hitherto dodged—accept those burdens you have hitherto shirked?

And will the loved one face those challenges with you, share those burdens—and despise you if you try to escape?

Then it is love—REALLY! And worth anything it costs.

Listen, World!

Love

Love doesn't "just happen." It is not a miraculous visitation—a superhuman seizure—an instantaneous explosion.

Elsie Robinson

Love starts happening when we start living—long before we find the loved one.

Love is an answer — love is many answers. Love is the answer to countless fears, fevers and frustrations, hopes and hungers, ecstasies and surrenders.

Love is the answer to all we are and aren't; have achieved—and haven't.

Love—the conscious awakening —comes when we are ready for it to come. But it is a long time getting ready.

We say, "I love!" And we think these two words always mean the same thing. No matter how we may differ in character, in intelligence, in taste and experience, we think that "love" is always the same thing . . . a beautiful and noble thing . . . always deserving reverence . . . always meriting gratitude.

JEALOUSY UNJUSTIFIED

But that's idiotic. Love isn't always the same thing. Love is never the same thing—not even in the same person!

Love is not necessarily beautiful, or noble, or even excusable. Love is as good as the individual who feels it—and no better. Love is—what-are-you and what-have-you?

Love may be a prayer—a song a blessing. Or it may be a coward's hide-away . . . an egotist's

'Dear Govt.' -:- By Winston Norman

Hon. Janitor,
White House.
Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Janitor:

I have took pen in hand to put a ring in your bonnet, Mr. Janitor. You could do a wonderful thing for the New Deal if you would sneak in the closet where Mr. Roosevelt keeps his Fishing-Tackle, and hide it out on him.

Fish will be the down-fall of Mr. Roosevelt if he don't watch out, because he went on a fishing trip last month, and things got better all over the U. S. A.

Take the Pants Presser on my block, for instance, he says to me:

"October was the biggest month the Cleaning Business ever had. I and my wife cleaned everybody in the Neighborhood & put $10 in the Bank."

I asked why the Pants Index had went up, and he says:

"Because Roosevelt laid off of us and went fishing, the Vice-Pres. was in Japan, Congress was home pitching hay, and we didn't have no more Govt than a jackrabbit."

I seen where the Pants Presser had been a Traitor to his country & went Republican on acct. he had $10.

"We are going to hang onto that $10," he says. "We are going to the Foles next Election and do something funny, we will vote the Republican Ticket."

"Oh, you will, will you?" I says, real mad. "So you want to go back to Horse & Buggy Govt, do you?"

"Hump," says the Pants Presser, "Horse & Buggy Govt. Is what we got now, because the Brain Trust has talked themselves Horse on a lot of Buggy Ideas for wasteing our money. I and my wife are tired of them," he says.

Mr. Janitor, that is a sample of how the Democrat Party has fell to pieces on my block. You better hide the President's tackle so as he can't take no more Fishing Trips.

A couple of more trips, and people would begin to think they was just as well off without Mr. Roosevelt and the New Deal.

The next thing you know, Elections would come along and Mr. Roosevelt would be in the same boat where Mr. Hoover is, without nothing to do except fish.

Yours, worried,
W. Norman.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

The latest startling news from the fields of Higher Education is the announcement that a mid-western college for women will teach girls how to use a powder-puff and manipulate a lipstick.

Helen Rowland

It will add to its curriculum a course in "personal grooming," which would seem to be the answer to every maiden's prayer.

Dermatology will at last take its rightful place beside geology, psychology and all the other sciences—and the skin you love to look at may win a sheepskin!

But teaching a modern girl how to apply the blush that won't come off, how to heighten that girlish color or how to wield an eyebrow pencil will be right in the class with teaching ducks to swim, hens to cackle and eagles to fly.

Most girls of today have been weaned on a lipstick, and have been "borrowing" Mother's rouge, snitching her nail-polish and dipping into her mascara since they were in grammar school.

And when it comes to knowing "how to wear clothes" and keeping three jumps ahead of the stylists, you can get your most authentic information from your neighbor's sixteen-year-old daughter.

Almost any average schoolgirl knows more about how to dress her eyelashes upward with vaseline to make them curl than does many a sophisticated multiple-divorcee.

Her knowledge of the latest hair-styles makes her mother feel like "those old days" indeed. And most girls begin taking those hip-reducing exercises and going in for thinning diets long before they are out of the kindergarten.

It is really very funny to see an anaemic little wisp of a thing in first year high passing up creamed potatoes or refusing an ice cream cone for the sake of what she fondly calls her "figure," when she looks as though the next strong breeze might carry her up to the top of the Empire State Building.

And when it comes to painting a Cupid's bow on an already lucious young mouth or rubbing a sophisticated blue shadow over an already sparkling baby eye, who can teach a debutante anything about THAT?

In the days when only the women known as "deciasse" dared touch up their faces and tint their hair, a course in "personal grooming" might have been something of a revelation to a Sweet Young Thing.

But, in these days, such a course seems about as superfluous as teaching a small boy to steal apples or teaching Fido to go after a flea.

The only thing that no college seems to have thought of, to make those "Bright College Years" more of a frolic and less of a serious matter, is to adopt a course in "boondoggling."

Fraternity Pranks

By WINIFRED BLACK

THEY initiated him into a popular college fraternity the other day, and in the midst of the glorious fun the poor fellow fell in a dead faint and they had to summon the firemen from the firehouse to bring him back to life by artificial respiration.

The young fellow who was being initiated was carried home weak and pale on the verge of another collapse.

I wonder how long it will be before he goes back and finishes that initiation?

Of course he wouldn't think of withdrawing from the popular fraternity. Why, no, he never could hold his head up again in collegiate circles if he did that, and, whatever he does, the doctors say his heart has had a bad strain from which it may take him years to recover.

Ten years from now, when he needs every drop of energy and every ounce of strength and endurance to make his fight for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, I wonder if he'll be sorry he had that initiation, or will he think it was all worth while?

We hear these tales every year at about this time when the collegiates are beginning to "initiate" the new members of their fraternities. Well, I suppose it's perfectly right and natural. Young colts must have their fling, mustn't they?

And they have to learn for themselves, and sometimes it's a little painful and sometimes even a serious illness finding the way through some of these rather crude "initiations."

But it seems to me all right in the long run, and there's no use of our lying awake nights worrying about one of these affairs.

Isn't It So?

Good workmen are never too numerous. The world cannot afford to overlook them.

Many hard experiences are infected with human malice.

He that plants thorns must not expect to gather roses.
